GENERAL WRANGEL TAKEN TO CONSTANTINOPLE AS REDS CAPTURE CRIMEA

Simferopol And Ferodosia Occupied By Bolshevists; France Not Ready To Recognise Soviet

(U. S. Naval Radio)

London, November 16.—According to a despatch received by the Exchange Telegraph Company, General Wrangel arrived at Constantinople on board the Russian cruiser Korneloff.

London, November 16.—A wireless message from Moscow confirms the reports that the Bolsheviki forces occupied Simferopol and Ferodosia.

Paris, Nov. 16.—The French foreign office announced that the defeat of General Wrangel does not mean that the government of France is ready to recognise the Russian Soviet government.

REPORT QUESTIONED

A radio message received in Shanghai yesterday stated that Constantinople had been occupied by the Bolshevist forces. It is believed that Constantinople was named through an error in transmission and that the dispatch referred to the occupation of Sebastopol. It is pointed out that not only the location of Constantinople makes its occupation by the Reds improbable but that the presence there of the Allied sea and land forces makes the occurance practically an impossibility.

London, November 15.—Due to the fact that Great Britain never recognised General Wrangel she is proceeding with negotiations aiming at the opening of trade relations with Soviet Russia.

The Admiralty denied reports that the British Navy assisted in the blockade of the Black sea and said they would continue strict neutrality there.

New York, November 14 (delayed).—The Paris correspondent of the Associated Press telegraphs the following, which was received from Sebastopol: "The forces of General Wrangel in Crimea are in a desperate situation; ships of many nations are at wharves taking aboard as many refugees as possible; The American Red Cross has sold all its supplies.

Rear Admiral McCully, commanding the American Adriatic Naval forces in Russian waters, will stay until the last moment. The American colony is safe on board the Destroyer Overton. McCully's ship, which reported that the Bolsheviki ultimatum to General Wrangel demanded an unconditional surrender."

U. S. SHIPS TO RESCUE

Washington, November 16.—Vice Admiral Huse, commandant of the American Naval forces operating in the North Sea, and who is now in London, reports that he is sending "all available American naval vessels to the Black Sea to assist in the evacuation of Americans from Crimea.

(Reuter's Service)

Constantinople, November 16. The evacuation of Sebastopol is continuing. The arrival is expected here of the Waldeck Rousseau, which was the last vessel to leave Sebastopol on Sunday, and the Russian vessel Korniloff, with General Wrangel on board. It is announced that the United States Government and the American Red Cross will come to the aid of the refugees.

Morocco Phosphate Bureau Established

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, November 16.—The French press announces the creation of a Moroccan phosphate bureau which, under the control of the Sherif's Government, will have an autonomous technical and financial administration, and whose executive officials will be given an interest in the output and profits.

London, November 16.—The Times publishes an article from a special correspondent who has just completed a motor tour of Algeria and Morocco in which the writer pays a tribute to the French colonists. After having described the work of General Lyautey, in Morocco, the Times correspondent asks: "Might we not well instruct our Colonial administrators to study on the spot the miracle of Morocco and the methods of her incomparable magician, General Lyautey?"

Chang Tso-lin For Pro-Jap Cabinet, Is His Agent's Report

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, November 17.—Yu Hung-chan, Chang Tso-lin's representative, arrived here today. He has made the statement that his visit is unofficial, and has for its object to promote more friendly relations between China and Japan.

Before securing that, Chang Tso-lin is of opinion that a really pro-Japanese Cabinet should be formed in Peking.

He intends visiting the Premier and others in responsible positions with this end in view.

URGA HOLDS OUT AGAINST ENEMY; CRISIS AT HAND

Socialist Factions Uniting At Vladivostok To Isolate Bolshevists

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Nov. 17.—A telegram from Manchuli (Manchuria Station) reports fighting on the border on Monday, when shells fell in Manchuli township.

The Chinese General, fearing a Partisan occupation of the town, is attempting to open up negotiations, while the Russians in the railway zone are apprehensive of a Partisan advance on Harbin.

According to a Chinese official message from Urga, that place is in no immediate danger, though the Russians are receiving strong reinforcements.

SITUATION GRAVE

On the other hand, a Japanese official report describes the situation at Urga as most dangerous, and the Legation has asked the Waichiaopu to safeguard the ten Japanese subjects there.

The American party which went to Urga is reported to be leaving there this morning, but it is doubtful whether Mr. Mills will leave, as the Chinese authorities are refusing sanction for the departure of his Russian friend, M. Fittinghouf, who is officially described as one of the ringleaders of Mongolian independence, and is stated to be claiming interests which China does not wish to be transferred to other foreigners.

SOCIALISTS UNITE

Vladivostok, November 16.—The Bolsheviki are finding themselves isolated in view of the fact that all Socialists are uniting. The assembly, at a meeting tomorrow, is expected to pass the following resolution:

"The All-Far-Eastern Government should be a socialistic coalition. It should act with supreme power for the independent state of Pri-Amur, which will retain its local assembly."

BRITISH IN SECOND PLACE

American Population Is Now 2,264—Germans Number 280 Remaining

As a result of a recent quinquennial census that was taken in October it has been found that the foreign population of the International Settlement of Shanghai has mounted to a total of 23,307 people, marking a gain from 1915 of 4,783. It included a total of 35 known different nationalities with 18 persons of undefined nationality.

Nearly fifty percent of the foreign population of the Settlement are Japanese whose numbers have increased in far greater proportion than any other nationality. The present Japanese population, given in the tables published in the current issue of the Municipal Gazette, totals 10,215, having gained 3,046 since 1915.

The British population continues to be second in numbers and now totals 5,341, having gained 519 since 1915. The Americans hold third place with a population of 2,264, a gain of 957 since 1915.

The Portuguese hold fourth place as they number 1,301, which is 22 less than were residing in the Settlement in 1915. The heavy influx of Russians into Shanghai is seen in the total their number has attained. They now number 1,266, a gain of 905 since 1915.

The census records that the German population which in 1915 totalled 1,155, has fallen off 875 as the present total now is 280.

LOCAL DEALERS IN PIECE GOODS CALLING STRIKE

Firms Handling "Sundries" And "Fancies" In Lead For General Walkout

Chinese piece goods dealers have called a general strike to start Monday and to continue for a month unless the market steadies. Dealers in "sundries" and "fancies" are taking the lead in the move and in all probability the walkout and lockout planned will be confined to these.

Several foreign dealers believe that the strike will help adjust the market as they claim that people will want to make purchases soon after the strike is declared. At present dealers are forced to clear at any price they can get.

At a meeting held yesterday of creditors of Mow Fung and Company, one of the largest piece goods firms, Messrs. Jardine, Matheson and Company were appointed liquidators. It was further agreed that Mow Fung, who has left Shanghai, is to return to act as broker for his own goods. It is said that the firm has some $15,000 worth of goods to be disposed of to satisfy creditors. The firm's obligations are believed to total nearly Taels 500,000.

Officers of the piece goods guild said yesterday that Chinese piece goods dealers have lost over Taels 30,000,000 and that some 500 are on the edge of bankruptcy because of the drop in exchange which started the depression.

FRANCE OUTLINES PLANS FOR USE OF FOE'S SHIPS

Some Will Be Destroyed At Once And Others Used For Practice

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, November 16.—The former Germany and Austrian vessels surrendered in accordance with the peace treaty have been placed in three categories; the first to be used, the second to be destroyed immediately, and the third to be employed for propaganda, and not destroyed for perhaps a year, their use being restricted to the purposes of propaganda and experiment.

The vessels of this last class which have been handed over to France include the armored cruisers Thuringen and Prinzeugen, the cruiser Emden and the destroyers V. 46, V. 126, and V. 100.

The Minister of Marine has decided that the former Austrian armored cruiser Prinzeugen will be utilised for experiments with aerial bombs and depth charges in place of the old coast-guard vessel Trehouart which will be returned to the yards.

Gunnery and fire-projection experiments will be made at Lorient with the Thuringen and bombing practice experiments at Brest with the Emden.

As for the destroyers for which no special use has yet been found, these will be sold after all material, such as spare parts for the ex-enemy torpedo-boats which have been incorporated with the French Fleet, has been removed.

U.S. TELEGRAMS REFUSED BY WESTERN UNION

Argument Over Tolls And Rebates Results In Drastic Order

CABLE IS INVOLVED

Barbados—Miami Incident Seen As Motive For New Ruling

(U. S. Naval Radio)

Washington, Nov. 16.—There is a war waging between the state department of the United States government and the Western Union Telegraph company.

The company's representatives are claiming that the state department have not paid their bills for over a year and will refuse to accept government messages until the tolls are paid.

On the other hand the state department claims that they have not been granted a rebate which more than offsets the amount claimed by the Western Union.

The state department officials believe that the company's action is in reality a protest against the governments refusal of a permit to land a cable at Miami, Florida from Barbadoes and also against the attitude of the American delegates at the communication conference regarding the disposition of former German cables.

The order refusing to handle government messages ostensibly applies to all departments.

LITTLE HSU AND WANG I-TANG IN PLOT, IS BELIEF

Escaped Anfuite And Former Delegate Seek Power In South, Rumor

(Staff Wire To THE CHINA PRESS)

Peking, Nov. 17.—Little Hsu is believed to be in Tientsin endeavoring to reach Shanghai, en route to unite with Wang I-tang in the promotion of an Anfu Yunnan-Canton coalition, of which the Peking government claims to have evidence.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Nov. 17.—According to a semi-official statement, after the arrival of Wang I-tang and Mr. Nishihara at Shanghai, telegrams reported that the former was intriguing to secure his appointment as chief of the Southern Military Administration, and negotiating for a Japanese loan of $4,000,000.

Chinese official circles state it is now clear that the Cantonese are unable to establish an administration representing more than Kwangtung.

The Government has requested the Diplomatic Corps to hand over the balance of the customs funds unexpended by the late Canton Administration.

Peking, November 16.—Mr. Obata, the Japanese Minister, today sent the following official note to the Waichiaopu: "I have the honor to inform your Excellency that Hsu Shu-tseng repeatedly communicated to me his desire to withdraw from the refuge of this Legation and to leave the Legation guard compound which has been his place of shelter, and that each time I strongly urged his reconsideration. I have now received a report from the commandant of the Legation Guard that Hsu Shu-tseng, who was in the Legation compound on the night of the fourteenth instant, was not visible next morning and could not be discovered in the compound.

"It must be concluded from the above that Hsu Shu-tseng secretly stole out between the night of the fourteenth and the next morning.

"In thus communicating the above fact to your Excellency with as little delay as possible, in the same spirit as that in which I informed you that I had consented to give Hsu Shu-tseng and others refuge on the ground of general international practice, and with no ulterior intention on my part, I avail, etc."

WAICHIAOPU REPLIES

Peking, Nov. 17.—The Waichiaopu, replying to the note from the Japanese Legation regarding the escape of Hsu Shu-tseng draws attention to the Japanese note of August 9, in which an undertaking

JAPAN WILL DROP RACIAL ARGUMENT

Nipponese Agree That Discussion At This Time Would Cause Trouble For Assembly

(Reuter's Service)

Geneva, November 14.—The headquarters of the League of Nations formed the center of attraction here this afternoon on the occasion of the first meeting of the Council, which was held in the white and gold salon overlooking the lake. M. Hymans presided, and Mr. H. A. L. Fisher, representing Great Britain, M. Leon Bourgeois, representing France, Viscount Ishii of Japan, Mr. D. Caclamanos, of Greece, and Signor T. Tittoni, of Italy, were among the delegates present.

An economic committee was nominated and an economic commission appointed to carry out the Brussels resolutions. Thus far eleven members have been selected, as it is uncertain whether the United States will be represented.

TOKIO REPORT DENIED

Regarding a report from Tokio that the Japanese have several so-called "equality proposals" to lay before the General Assembly of the League, the Japanese Ambassador stated that the report is quite untrue, pointing out that for practical purposes it would be useless to introduce sensational matter to the Assembly, and adding:

"We must always consider the feeling of Australia and also of California."

LAND BILL IN JAPAN

Tokio, Nov. 17.—The Nichi Nichi states that the Government is introducing a bill in the coming session of the Diet, giving all foreigners, irrespective of residence, land-owning rights throughout the Empire, except in defense zones. This measure will supersede the law of 1910, which excluded Hokkaido and Formosa, and was not promulgated.

Tokio, November 16.—The Kokumin understands that Japan's objectives in the American negotiations are, firstly, the maintenance of the "gentlemen's agreement" with stricter restrictions, and secondly a new treaty, guaranteeing equal treatment for Japanese residents in the United States. This basis is considered absolutely essential for the maintenance of national prestige.

Imperial treatment is wanted, but not necessarily the right to own land. The proposed legislation giving land-owning rights to foreigners in Japan is entirely apart from the question of American anti-Japanese legislation, it is stated.

Del Monte, Cal. November 16.—The California house apartment association made resolutions opposing the Japanese having any interests in apartment houses.

SESSION MAY LAST MONTH

(U. S. Naval Radio)

New York, November 15.—The Geneva correspondent of the Associated Press telegraphs: "The United States was not represented officially when the first session of the League of Nations was held but throughout the sessions an American observer will be present who will keep Washington informed of all developments. The Council of the League made arrangements yesterday for the United States to have a representative to the financial commissions as well as to the commission on economic mandates should she so desire.

The governments of Honduras and Ecuador are the only other American nations not sending delegates to the assembly, which it is believed will be in session for a period of three or four weeks.

GERMANY OPPOSED

Harding Gives His Views Of America's Position In War

(Reuter's Service)

Brownsville, Texas, November 13.—Senator Harding in addressing a border crowd here on the occasion of the Armistice Day celebrations, said that Americans craved fraternity, but demanded their freedom and their own America. America had not fought for the purpose of "making the world safe for democracy," but for the one supreme cause that inspired men to offer their all for their country and flag.

First Radiogram Received Here From Immense Station At Bordeaux Reports On Sessions

(Reuter's Service)

Geneva, November 16.—The general assembly of the League of Nations opened here yesterday with an address by M. Motta, President of the Swiss Confederation, who welcomed the delegates. M. Hymans of Belgium was elected president of the assembly.

In the afternoon, at the request of M. Leon Bourgeois, it was decided that the applications of Austria, Bulgaria, Albania and Azerbeijan for admission to the League of Nations should be referred to a special commission for its report.

REPORT BY RADIO

Shanghai, Nov. 17.—The first direct message to the Far East from the great Bordeaux wireless station was received in Shanghai by the French Municipal Wireless Station this morning. The message contains the full official report of the first two days proceedings of the assembly of the League of Nations at Geneva.

The opening of regular radiotelegraphic communication between the Bordeaux Station which is the most powerful in the world, and the Far East, may be regarded as an epoch-making event.

Geneva, (via Bordeaux), November 15.—The following official communique has been issued of the first day's proceedings of the Assembly of the League of Nations.

The first Assembly of the League of Nations, which has called to Geneva over a 1,000 persons belonging to the various delegations and over 200 foreign journalists, met this morning. Forty one States were represented and twelve States not yet admitted to the League attended the Session.

APPEAL TO AMERICANS

The inaugural addresses were delivered by the President of the Swiss Confederation, M. Motta, and the President of the Council of the League of Nations, M. Hymans, delegate for Belgium. Both speakers expressed the hope that the League would develop and addressed a particularly warm appeal to the American people.

M. Motta, seconded by Senor Quinones de Leon (Spain), proposed that M. Hymans, should ex-officio be President of the Assembly. The proposal for a secret ballot, moved by M. Branting (Sweden) and supported by M. Hymans and Lord Robert Cecil (South Africa) was adopted by the Assembly. Each delegation was called upon to vote in order, and M. Hymans, the only candidate for the Presidency, was declared to be elected by 35 votes. The Assembly loudly cheered the announcement of the election of a President who represented heroic Belgium, who suffered in order to remain true to her international obligations.

At the afternoon session, it was decided, on the motion of the Brazilian delegation, to place a wreath on the statue of Jean Jacques Rousseau, citizen of Geneva.

MESSAGE TO WILSON

Mr. George Barnes (British Empire) moved that a telegram be sent to President Wilson: the motion was adopted.

The President moved the adoption of the provisional standing orders of the Assembly, and the appointment of six Commissions each to deal with a certain group of questions, each delegation to have one representative on each Commission. On the motion of MM. Bourgeois and Hanotaux (France), it was decided that these Commissions should be as follows:

(1). Commission of General Organisation;

(2). Commission of Technical Organisation; Hygiene; Transit; and Permanent Financial Organisation:

(3). Commission on Legal Questions:—Court of International Law.

(4). Commission on the League's Finances:

(5). Commission on the Admission of New States:

(6). Commission of Armaments and Mandates.

The applications for admission of Albania, Bulgaria Austria and Azerbaijan, although received by the League after October 15, were referred to the Commission concerned.

NO TIME LOST

Today's session was notable for the speed with which business was transacted. The speeches were short: the representatives of more than 15 delegations spoke in rapid succession, thus giving the various motions submitted the benefit of a public debate.

The freedom and spontaneity of the debate left a very favorable impression alike on the public and on the delegates themselves, who loudly cheered Signor Tittoni (Italy) when he declared that the League of Nations could only live if it had the public opinion of the world in its side.

SECOND DAY'S SESSION

Geneva (via Bordeaux), November 16.—The following is the official communique of the second day's proceedings of the Assembly of the League of Nations:

The Assembly today was informed by the Government of Peru of a demand for a revision of the Treaty of 1883 between Chile and Peru. It was also informed by the Bolivian Government of a demand for a revision of the Treaty of 1904 between Bolivia and Chile. The Peruvian and Bolivian delegations wishing to discuss the question between themselves, the examination of these demands was adjourned.

The Assembly continued at its two sessions today the discussion of procedure, from the point of view that an International meeting of this kind is without precedent and that therefore the question of procedure is of unusual importance.

After an animated debate in which there took part notably M. Hagerup (Norway), M. Karnebeek (Holland), Signor Tittoni (Italy), Mr. H. A. L. Fisher (England), Mr. E. D. Millen (Australia), and M. Leon Bourgeois (France), the original project was profoundly modified. The Assembly decided to appoint twelve Vice-Presidents, six being the Presidents of the Commissions, the other six to be elected by secret ballot.

WILL PUBLISH MINUTES

On the proposal of M. Nansen (Norway) and after speeches by M. Bourgeois (France), Viscount Ishii (Japan) and the Indian delegates, it was decided that in the choice of Vice-Presidents, account should be taken of the necessity for equitable representations of all parts of the world.

Lord Robert Cecil (South Africa) supported by Sir J. Allen (New Zealand) raised the question of publicity regarding the work of the Commissions. After a speech by M. Viviani (France), supported by Signor Tittoni (Italy) and Mr. H. A. L. Fisher (England), it was decided that the minutes of the Commissions should be published and at the disposal of the Assembly.

WORK IN HARMONY

The Assembly wishing to work effectively as soon as possible, decided, on the motion of Signor Tittoni (Italy), supported by Senhor Octavio (Brazil), and M. Viviani (France), to follow Parliamentary procedure, and resolved that the Commissions should start work immediately and prepare reports for examination in public session. It was arranged that, in principle, public sittings should be held in the morning, while the Commissions would meet in the afternoon.

Apart from the Assembly's resolution to work quickly and methodically, the salient characteristic of today's session was the unanimity with which delegates from all parts of the world agreed, after a short discussion, on the method of work to be adopted.

Kailan Mine Officials Deny Peking Charges

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tientsin, Nov. 17.—According to the Peking and Tientsin Times, the Minister of Agriculture and Commerce has twice addressed letters to the Kailan Mining Administration with reference to the disaster which occurred on October 14.

In these the Ministry criticised the Administration's engineering methods, condemned their hospital, urged that $1,000 should be paid to the relatives of those who were killed, and alleged that the staff "treat human lives as lightly as straw."

The second letter states that a powerful commission, representing four Ministries, has been appointed to investigate the conduct of the Administration, and to decide what steps shall be taken for the future treatment of the miners.

Mr. P. C. Young, the Acting General Manager, in a lengthy reply, published in the Peking and Tientsin Times, refutes the charges which, as he points out, have been made without awaiting the Commission's report.

He shows that many of the charges are based on ill-informed statements: for example, the Ministry alleges that the cause of the disaster was the use of obsolete lamps, whereas only those of the most modern pattern are used.

Further, the Ministry alleges that the hospital will only accommodate 20 patients, whereas there are never less than 70 there. The hospital, he says, not only receives Kailan Mining Administration cases, but does a vast amount of charitable work, and last year treated 10,000 cases outside the Administration's employment.

Mr. Young says he has reason to believe that the compensation is the highest paid by any mines in China, and the miners are excellently looked after, the houses, baths and amusements being most up-to-date.

Mr. Young adds that he has welcomed the appointment of the Commission, and is placing all available information at its disposal.

New Outrages Reported In Irish Rebellion

(Reuter's Service)

London, November 14.—Seven police were ambushed at Knockbource, Kildare. Two of their assailants were killed and five captured, but none of the police themselves were hit.

In the course of a raid in search of concealed arms, a party of Dublin police fired one shot at an advancing crowd of men who refused to halt. The bullet hit two children, killing one of them.

In the Templemore district a former constable was viciously beaten with sticks and is not expected to live.

Two masked and armed men entered the Post Office at Castleconnell, held up the Postmistress and stole money and stamps to the value of £1,400.

The residence in North London of Mr. P. J. Maloney, Sinn Fein member of the House of Commons for South Tipperary, has been burned down. It was recently raided by the police who seized a quantity of documents.

A police motor-car was ambushed near Tipperary, and three policemen killed and three wounded. The car was brought to a standstill by a shot which struck the steering-gear.

The police put up a gallant resistance, but their car was burned. The attack was made close to the quarters of the police on the Gallybally road.

It is reported that a bomb was flung into the car.

The Belle Of New York

This most entrancing of all musical comedies was greeted by another full house at the Lyceum last night, and again it lifted twenty odd years off our shoulders, darkened our hair, wafted the wrinkles away and brought the roses back to our cheeks. The A.D.C. surely is to be congratulated on this production. At the end, the stage was again banked with flowers and both the producer, M. Lemiere, and the musical director, Mr. Raynes, were called for by the enthusiastic audience. Principals and chorus were in their best form and the show went with a swing that would shame many a professional company. We earnestly hope that the A.D.C. will find it possible to give a number of extra performances.

Chinese Is Stabbed By Armed Robbers

A Chinese living in the country district off Baikal Road was stabbed about the head by armed robbers early yesterday morning when he gave the alarm which foiled the bandits' plans.

The attempted robbery occurred shortly after midnight. The victim, hearing the gang approach, stepped outside to investigate and gave the alarm. He was cut in a number of places about the head and was later taken to St. Luke's Hospital, where it was said that his condition is not serious. The robbers fled across country, firing two shots as they left.

To have a Savings Bank Book is a recommendation of the highest kind. It is a certificate of character. The employer takes a special interest in those fellow-workers who save a regular, definite portion of their salaries. He knows he can rely upon young people who have ambition enough to save.

This bank also takes an interest in young people of his type. And it helps them by adding 4% interest to the funds they deposit here, subject to usual regulations. One dollar or more will start an account this week. Save before you spend. Make your deposit on pay-day.

Immigrants Will Be Barred From U.S. If Bill Is Passed

(U. S. Naval Radio)

New York, Nov. 16.—Chairman Johnson, of the House of Representatives immigration committee, made a statement that the revelations at Ellis Island are staggering, and he was sure that the country never realised the menace of immigration.

He said he would introduce a restricton bill, that is nearly as complete as possible, to Congress as he is more than convinced of the necessity of a suspension of all immigration.

The October immigration at Ellis Island was 74,665.

OAK FLOORING AND PANELLING

Stand The Hard Test Of Time

When installing any other wood than Oak for flooring or panelling, one item must be taken into consideration in counting the cost, and that is the fact that in a very few years the floor will have to be renewed. With Oak, however, at the end of a quarter of a century, the flooring and panelling is not only more pleasing to the eye than when new, but is also worth a great deal more.

WE SUPPLY OAK FOR FLOORING, WAINSCOTING, PANELLING, ETC., ETC., KILN-DRIED AND QUALITY GUARANTEED

We give all orders personal attention. After you have placed your order with us, the flooring will be laid and all work carried out under the personal supervision of a foreign expert of the Company. This supervision costs you nothing and we prefer to do this for you.

Insist that all lumber for flooring and panelling for interior work bears the "Three Pines" Trade Mark, and the letters "KD" signifying kiln-dried, thus ensuring its perfect quality, and suitability for the severe climatic conditions of China.

Big Display Of Blooms At Autumn Flower Show

Chrysanthemum Exhibit Is Second Largest In Horticultural Society's History; Continues Today

The largest display of chrysanthemums collected for the delectation of Shanghai flower lovers in the last five years, and the second largest in the history of the Shanghai Horticultural Society, is that now on view on the Bund foreshore, where the annual Autumn flower show is in progress.

The exhibit fills the big double-winged matshed which has been especially constructed for the affair and there is a wealth of color and variety in the blooms which have been entered by the Society's members. As usual there are a number of new varieties on show and the shadings run through a range of degrees which would total several hundred.

There are some especially fine examples of the bush variety of "mums," as well as some beautiful collections of individual blossoms. In the prize feature, the six-best-plant entry, first honors go to Mrs. Ayscough, with Mrs. Ezra taking second prize, both exhibits being of fine character.

EXTENSIVE EXHIBITS

Taken as a whole the blooms are not of so high a quality as seen in previous years, but the extent of the exhibits tends to offset this. The vegetable display, as is usual with Autumn shows, is not very large but is very creditible nonetheless.

The decorated table competition, which has been revived again after a lapse of two seasons, brought out some ten entries, several of which will take the attention of visitors, though none are of particularly striking nature in comparison with some past seasons' efforts.

The show continues today, when it is expected there will be a good attendance of visitors. The Municipal orchestra is to play.

The judges of the entries were Messrs. J. Ambrose, Major Payne L. Grenard, Way Yu-ding, Westcott and C. Wingrove.

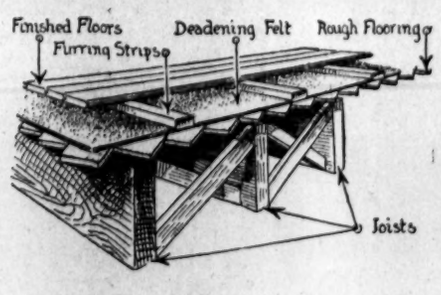
How To Fight Moisture

(A series of suggestions to building owners, factory superintendents, transportation companies, commercial houses, contractors and architects.)

Suggestion No. 3—Floors



For factories, mills, chemical plants, godowns, offices, stores, residences, etc.—in fact, any multi-story building. Moisture-proof construction is necessary for EVERY floor.

Such precaution permanently prevents water from leaking through upper floors to the lower part of the building, and thereby saves valuable goods, lighting fixtures, etc., from damage.

In such buildings the interruption of work on one floor due to fire hose or pipe breakage will not affect the lower floors.

EVERY floor can be made waterproof by cementing one or two layers of Certain-teed Roofing, Certain-teed Asphalt Felt or Insulating Paper between the sub-floor and the finished floor.

TEMPORARY LULL IN R.V.F. DISPUTE OVER SHIPPING

Ship To Unload Cargo; Old Agents May Try To Block Sailing

At a conference held yesterday arrangements were made for the handling of the cargo of the Russian Volunteer Fleet steamer Stavropol, over the control of which controversy has arisen between the old and the new agencies of the company.

The ship reported to the new agency, the China Commercial Development Company, on arrival here, after the old agents and the Russian consular officials had attempted to obtain her documents. Failing to obtain them the latter faction endeavored to have the Customs prohibit the unloading of the ship's cargo, consisting largely of fish. Yesterday, upon bond being furnished, the Customs gave Captain Grunberg permission to handle the cargo and there the matter rests for the present, though it is expected that the old agents will make an attempt to have the ship restrained here when she is ready to leave port.

FEODOROFF LEADS

It is said that the old agents here are working under the direction of Nicholas Feodoroff, former Russian Consul and Russian Volunteer Fleet agent at Tsuruga, Japan, who was instrumental in the seizure of several of the company's ships last summer, when the new directorate was appointed in Vladivostok.

The move expected from them is that they will attempt to have the Stavropol held up on a restraining order by a local shipyard, based on claims for repairing done on ships of the fleet of which Feodoroff has obtained control. One of these ships, the Indigurka, is at present in this port.

CALLED AT CHEFOO

After the attempt to obtain the Stavropol's documents, which attempt extended to the holding up of a motor car in which the captain and the new local agent, Mr. L. F. Patstone, were proceeding to the office of the Commissioner of Foreign Affairs and the serving upon the former of a "consular order" for the papers, a telegram was sent to the Vladivostok directorate. A reply, confirming the power of attorney of the new agent and stating that it was registered with the Chinese Consulate in Vladivostok, was received for reference to the Customs.

The Stavropol, it is claimed, left Vladivostok after an agreement between the Vladivostok and the Chinese governments wherein it was stipulated that the ship was not to be detained in any China port. She had previously called at Chefoo where her papers were presented to the Chinese Commissioner.

CARPENTIER WINS PLACE IN BOXING'S HALL OF FAME, SAYS BRITISH OBSERVER

Thinks French Heavyweight Has Strange Psychological Power Over Opponents In Ring—Believes He Will Give Dempsey A Merry Time When They Meet

By E. B. Osborne
(The Manchester Sunday Chronicle)

I have seen nearly all the great heavy-weights of the last forty years in action, and have tried, with some success, to understand why and how they have succeeded in the most nerve-racking of man-to-man games.

Of those I have studied, Peter Jackson was the finest all-round boxer (Corbett coming second), and, in spite of his mahogany skin, as white a sportsman as ever climbed into the squared circle.

Bob Fitzsimmons was the deadliest fighter of all, for when he was within striking distance, after stalking his man with long, slithering paces and furious eyes, round after round, his lightning body-blow seemed launched by a charge of spiritual T. N. T.

Only Jeffries, that mountainous man, could endure the terrific impact of the Fitzsimmons bodyblow delivered on a shift.

TOO BIG TO HURT

But Jeffries, in physique as well as in massive equanimity, was an Alp moulded like a man—and the hair grew on him like forests below the snow line on the far-away Matterhorn. He was too big to hurt.

As for Jack Johnson at his best (when he smashed the mere shell of Jeffries at Reno), he was the most dangerous glove-fighter in retreat I have ever watched. He was not so much a boxer as a man-trap baited to catch soul as well as body—the body to be caught by enticing it subtly within reach of a sudden upper-cut, the power of which flickered out of the rosin'd floor; the soul to be snared by the ceaseless stream of soft, insulting jeers, vitriol in salad oil, which came from his blubber lips.

CARPENTIER'S WILL

Unless it be Dempsey, whom I must take on trust (American variety), we have no living heavy-weight in sight who can compare with the world champions I have named either in the science of the game or in sheer fighting force.

What went ye out for to see? Something more than a mere pugilist—in very truth, a soul battling in six-ounce gloves and nakedly accomplishing the impossible!

Georges Carpentier is not, nor could, nor ever will be, a great boxer. When he was a slender, white-faced boy, using the movements of a contortionist to evade an opponent's onslaught, he looked like training on into a boxing genius of the caliber of the Dixie Kid or our own Jimmy Wilde.

He has, it is true, that instinct for ring strategy and tactics which is the outcome of the unique experience of fighting his way up through all the weights.

But the boxing of little men differs as much from the boxing of big men as batting on a fast pitch does from batting on a slow one—and the early promise of super-science has not been fulfilled since he entered the heavy-weights' sphere, where power counts for more than pace and precision together.

Nor is he a great fighter. He was outfought, almost overwhelmed, by the bear-like Klaus and the panther-like Papke, sheer rough-house fighters who could not be kept out by the straightest straight left, and, once inside, could jolt a man's guts out of him.

Yet in these hopeless battles Carpentier's unconquerable soul blazed gloriously through clouds of defeat, and Descamps, his familiar, had literally to pull him out of the ring.

But in character he is the greatest of all—and how much that means you shall learn from the romance of the ring just published which, though it cannot have been by Carpentier himself, is yet manifestly a faithful record of the memories and opinions of the famous boxer himself and of his father in art, trainer, and inseparable companion, Francois Descamps.

GRATEFUL TO MANAGER

In this book, as always in conversation with French and English friends, Carpentier joyously confesses the debt of gratitude he owes to Descamps. This is one of the friendships of the David and Jonathan type which are not uncommon in the history of the ring—a place where men see one another in the ritual altogether, and spirit recognitates to kindred spirits more quickly than elsewhere.

But the chief lesson of it all is that boxing, like war, is three-parts a spiritual issue. Carpentier has the swordsman's eyes; he proved it when he "pinked" Beckett fatally in the latter's first moment of carelessness.

But others have had the swordsman's accurate sense of timing and distance. Carpentier alone can use his spirit for a sword. He only a soul in six-ounce gloves, whose character is a more glittering thing than his career.

Some have hinted that Carpentier was kept in cotton wool during the war—that he saw no more of the game of games than did the American and British pugilists (we can all name them) who were eager to fight anybody save Germans.

It is a wretched libel. For this book quotes the "mentions" of the famous boxer in "Orders of the Day" for valor as a fighting airman, and tells you why, after Carpentier won the Croix de Guerre, President Poincare decorated him with the Medaille Militaire behind Verdun on November 5, 1916.

A GALLANT OF FRANCE

I have looked on every fight of the hundreds I have watched and described as a clash of character, and again and again I have seen the braver spirit victorious in spite of physical inferiority.

But "My Fighting Life" is the first volume of ring history which points this glorious truth on every page.

When I first saw Carpentier in action at Paris, the old, cold courage of the pallid expit boy, a mere wisp of childhood, touched me to the heart. And his book tells me how, in all his earlier fights against other and heavier boxers, no amount of pounding could ever break his will-to-victory.

His saying about Dempsey ("but he is only human!") is in keeping with his character and career. If the Carpentier-Dempsey battle ever comes off, my money goes on the French champion. Yes, I'd sooner lose on Carpentier than win on Dempsey.

For I see in Carpentier, the more vividly for reading his life, a gentleman unafraid, a type of the unconquerable valor of France, an heir to the joyous gallantry of Du Guesdin and Bayard, of the Musketeers of Dumas, of the Napoleonic warriors, of the Poilus who won Verdun while Carpentier himself flew low over the long battle in his battle-plane.

Such souls are never defeated though they fly west over the brink of evening.

SPLENDID MEET OF FOOTBALLERS TAKES PLACE

Thirteen Clubs Sign Up For Second Division; Fifty Attend Conference

An informal meeting of the Shanghai football association took place last night at the Cathedral School for Boys, when matters of interest regarding association football were discussed. The attendance was the largest that has been seen at any local meeting of footballers for some years past, and foreshadows a season full of interest.

Mr. A. J. Stewart was elected to the chair, and called upon the various clubs to name their representatives. There will be four teams entered for the Senior League, and no less than thirteen for the Junior.

The Seniors are Shanghai Football Club, Shanghai Recreation Club, the Municipal Police and St. Francis Xaviers.

Teams for the second combination are: Shanghai Football Club, The Recreation Club, St. Francis Xaviers, the Police, Customs, International Club, Rangers, Public School for Boys, Electricity Department, Jewish Recreation Club, the Navy, the British American Tobacco Company, and the Shanghai Waterworks Club.

"GEE-BEE" HONORED.

Mr. E. P. Graham Barrow was appointed secretary for the meeting. It was proposed that League games be started on Saturday next and this met with unanimous approval. Quite an animated discussion took place on the subject of the registration of players, but no decision was arrived at, and it was left to the League committee to settle the matter.

Footballers should note that a new rule has passed the English Association Board and will naturally be adopted here. In future there will be no off-side from a throw-in. Otherwise the rules are the same as last seasons.

The representatives of all the clubs then drew for the first series of games to be played on Saturday.

AMERICANS HAVE NEVER WON FROM AUSSY RACKETERS

Court Stars From U. S. Hope To Lift Davis Cup In International Tie

Precedent will have to be broken if the American team that has started on the first lap of its journey to Australasia is to come back with the Davis cup in its possession. No American squad yet has beaten a team from "down under" in a challenge round of the famous international tennis tournament, either in this country or in Australia. The United States has been successful in several preliminary rounds with Australia, but in four challenge rounds on record America has been beaten.

In 1908, on the occasion of the Americans' first visit to Australia, Beals C. Wright and Frederick B. Alexander were beaten by Norman E. Brooks and the late Anthony F. Wilding three matches to two. Wright accounting for the 2 points for his side. In the challenge round the

REVIEW OF WORLD SERIES SHOWS THAT CLEVELAND WON BECAUSE OF BETTER TEAM

No Suspicion Of Flukiness, Says Herald Observer—Declares That Stanley Coveleskie Was Bright Particular Star Of The Games—Praises O'Neill And Speaker

By Daniel
(The New York Herald)

The world's series of 1920 was one of those which left behind it no questions of doubt—no suspicions of flukiness. The Cleveland club defeated the Dodgers because it was the better team. Brooklyn had been given a strong chance because of the belief that it had the stronger pitching staff.

But this belief was exploded with the change of scene to Cleveland, The American Leaguers, as it turned out, had not only the better pitchers—and the one great, best pitcher in the person of Stanley Coveleskie—but they had far greater and more consistent power, which was massed at the right time.

The figures will show that the Dodgers outfielded the Indians, but in so far as their bearing on the issue was concerned, they lie. The Indians made more errors than did the Brooklyns, but when it came to a pinch the Clevelands nearly always were right there. When they had to field brilliantly they did so. Cleveland proved the stronger team largely because its players performed right up to form. A glance at the batting averages will show that with few exceptions, the most notable of whom was Gardner, they batted up to their pennant season figures.

COVELESKIE A HERO

The hero of the series, by all odds, was Coveleskie. The big Pole was in top notch shape and was assisted by the fact that the Dodgers are one of the most helpless outfits in the major leagues against spitball pitching. This had been demonstrated by Douglas of the Giants and Doak of the Cardinals. Coveleskie always had the Brooklyns completely at his mercy.

In the first game he was "in a hole" against only two batsmen. In the second he let down a bit, but in the final and most glorious victory of the trio he could do about anything he wanted to with the Flatbush clan. He swung the ball over about waist high. Rarely did he throw it higher, and when a great spitball pitcher can keep his specialty coming over low, and yet not too low, he is going to make any set of batsmen look foolish.

O'NEIL NEXT BEST

Second to Coveleskie among the heroes of the series was Steve O'Neil, the catcher. O'Neil handled every pitcher faultlessly, and he handled Coveleskie with particularly brilliant effect. The masterly catching of the Cleveland man could be appreciated most by veterans who had been catchers themselves. Wilbert Robinson himself was not backward about paying O'Neil a great tribute. George Stallings, manager of the Braves, said that O'Neil was, in his opinion, the greatest catcher in the game. Fred Mitchell, leader of the Cubs, was just as strong as Stallings in his appraisal of O'Neil's ability.

Third among the heroes is Tris Speaker, who ranged over the entire outfield with sensational effect, and dealt not a few telling blows with the bat. Behind him came Elmer Smith with his home run with bases filled, and Bill Wambsganss of the unassisted triple.

THE BROOKLYN STARS

A few words about the Brooklyn club. Perhaps it felt just a bit too soon that it was fighting a losing battle. But in the main the men put up a spunky, gritty struggle against a much superior foe. Grimes and Smith were great pitchers in Brooklyn, but when they came to Cleveland they sagged woefully.

Otto Miller, the catcher who was supposed to be the weakest cog in the Brooklyn machine, acquitted himself with great credit. Miller caught the best ball of his career. His uncanny judgment in calling for pitchouts when Indians were about to steal and his sensing the hit and run stood out in bold relief in the Brooklyn side of the argument.

Ivy Olson made his detractors look cheap by playing a bang up game and finishing the series with as much grit and snap as he showed at the start. He was one player who never let up for even an instant. Pete Kilduff, who played a sensational game at second, was another Dodger who covered himself with glory.

Myers was the big figure in the outfield—though Wheat and Griffith were no slouches either. It was highly unfortunate that Jimmy Johnston was injured and could not finish the series. The loss of the third baseman was one of the factors which certainly did not help the Dodgers.

Health, Beauty And The Home

Pickling Time

By Mrs. Christine Frederick,
The Distinguished Authority on Household Efficiency.

IN our grandmother's day pickling time was an annual event, and no housekeeper thought of letting the season go by without putting up a supply of catsup, picalilli, chow-chow and other condiments. To-day, owing to the extensive development of canned foods, the market offers dozens of standard makes of pickles and sour relishes. But even so, there is no reason why many a housekeeper cannot still prepare a few jars or bottles at home.

To me there is something even more fascinating in preparing pickles and such accessories than there is in the canning of fruits or vegetables. The making of relishes offers such an opportunity for originality, taste, flavor and the "spice o' things" generally. There is no limit to the new kinds of combinations possible in the handling of cabbage, green tomatoes, cucumbers and tiny white onions.

Such work is even less difficult than canning. Since no sterilization is needed, the foods have a better chance of keeping, owing to the preservative action of the salt, vinegar and spice. For example, just last week, as I was poking around among some seldom-inspected jars, I found an open quart of a sweet-pickle syrup. In the bottom lay the bag of spices, and even though the jar had been exposed to the air for probably a year the contents were unmolded and perfectly delicious. Of what other method of preserving could this have been true?

One last argument in favor of doing a fair amount of this work at home is the greatly lessened cost of the home product in comparison with the commercial pack. A small jar of good relish or pickle of manufactured make costs from half a dollar up, and the amount may be so small that it will be used up at a single meal, whereas the housekeeper herself can duplicate the same amount and quality for a few cents. She does not have to pay for her own time or for factory costs or for insurance to workmen, or any of the other big items which must be added to the cost of a commercial article and ultimately charged to the consumer.

Wise indeed was the woman who saved the various glass jars and containers of previous years in which the commercial article was sold. The price of glass has gone up 200 per cent in less than three years, and probably the cost of the glass container is one of the biggest items in the expense of such products. Any pickle jar, catsup bottle or jar in which peanut butter and such delicacies come should certainly be saved for later home use.

The kind of pickle to prepare will depend somewhat on the family's taste. Some persons prefer very sour relishes, while to others the sweet ones are preferable. Some like "straight pickles" of large size, while others prefer the more complicated combinations of finely ground form. If a very large quantity of any pickle is to be prepared, let her watch the market and take it when there is a "slump" in green tomatoes and such articles are at the lowest price—unless, of course, she has them in her own garden.

Before starting the actual work be sure that all needed supplies are at hand, for all too often we must stop in the midst of an operation to rush for some forgotten set of rubbers, spices, etc. Be sure before starting that you have sufficient jars and containers, that they are clean, that you have rubber rings, paraffin and every essential spice, vinegar, sugar and ingredient.

Also read over the recipe carefully in order to gauge the amount it will make. Probably in no other set of directions is there so often such indefiniteness in regard to the quantity which will result. And after preparing any recipe and finding out for yourself how many pints or pecks it furnishes, be sure to write this down in connection with the recipe for future guidance. There is nothing more confusing than to look at a recipe beginning "take one peck of green tomatoes, twelve cabbages, a quart of red peppers," or something of like nature, and try to estimate how many jars or bottles of a given size this will make.

Be sure, if vinegar is required, to obtain the best possible, for it is the prime ingredient in all relishes, and according to its quality will the flavor be excellent or coarse, strong and harsh. No amount of dilution will make bad vinegar better. There are malt vinegar, cider vinegar and wine vinegar, and all three may be obtained in trade-marked brands at good stores. It is much wiser to pay a few cents more for a bottled brand of quality than to trust the grocer's vinegar sold loose.

Don't forget that all is not spice that smells. There is scarcely any other article of food or use which is so commonly adulterated. The husk or some coarse part of a spice plant may be ground fine and the average user would never know that he was not getting the true spice. Often cornstarch and other adulterants are added to give weight.

Good spices cost money, and the consumer's only protection is to buy boxed spices bearing a well-known maker's name which has been a standard of quality for a long period. There is every difference between ground cinnamon which is kept open and sold loose, for example, and that which has been kept in an air-tight container. Mustard is another important spice whose quality should be insured, as, like vinegar, it is either very, very good, or very poor, in which case it will spoil an entire batch of product.

Tooth Troubles

By Lina Cavalieri,
The Most Famous Living Beauty.

TO avoid aching and unsightly teeth I go to a dentist once every six months to have my teeth examined. Sometimes I think it would be wiser not to let more than three months at most go by without a visit to the dentist for an inspection of the teeth.

For the care and preservation of the teeth four things are essential. They are: Proper diet, proper tooth brush, proper tooth powders or pastes and proper mouth baths.

But beyond any doubt the first safeguard is to have a reliable, skilful dentist—if you can make sure of finding one. One may go for years with false confidence in a dentist before one finds out her sad mistake.

The best dentist is none too good. The careless or ignorant or lazy or dishonest dentist may cause irreparable damage. And the saddest part of it is that we are totally at the mercy of the dentist, because most of us cannot know whether his work is good or bad until the damage is done. But try to get one whose reputation will ensure care and reliability at least.

There often come on the teeth, particularly between them, where food is permitted to lodge, small, dark stains which really are the first warnings or premonitory signs of decay. If allowed to remain the enamel eventually disintegrates and we have a cavity, which must then be excavated still further and filled.

Before this discoloration has advanced to an actual breaking down of the tooth structure it may very properly and successfully be removed or polished away by the dentist's engine and the sandpaper disc used for this purpose and for smoothing gold fillings.

The best dentist will do this and restore the tooth to its original color and soundness, after which it may be, with care, indefinitely preserved, but the unscrupulous dentist may, of course, construe this suspicious looking spot as the caries, and he may wickedly cut away sound tooth surface, fill in with the customary unsightly gold or amalgam, and the unsuspecting victim pays the bill and departs none the wiser. Of course, in the front teeth it is especially a misfortune to create a cavity where it could have been avoided.

Let us consider now the diet. We must avoid extremes. The English girl's answer to the question: "Why do you have such beautiful complexions?" might as well have been made to another query: "Why do English girls have such beautiful teeth?" The girl replied: "Because we never eat anything very sweet or sour, nor anything very hot or cold." That is an excellent rule.

Whoever follows it will adopt an admirable dietary. Also, live, if possible, in a region whose soil is strongly impregnated with lime.

Let me explain why the diet is of so great importance. Those foods which contain lime strengthen the teeth. Fifty-four and seven-tenths of the composition of the teeth is phosphate of lime when they are in normal condition.

To get as much lime as possible into the system, and so into the teeth, is as necessary as to have as much iron as possible in the framework of a house. The iron in the framework of the house will resist storms and fires. The lime in the teeth will prevent their softening and decay.

Therefore, gluten and whole wheat bread and the cooked cereals, instead of cakes and white breads and sweets should be eaten. These should be supplemented by various preparations of phosphates to introduce lime into the system.

Do not eat candy, pastry, puddings except those consisting chiefly of fruit; ices, pickles, sour oranges or grape fruit, except sparingly. Do not drink too much sour lemonade or limade. Avoid ice water or very hot tea or coffee. I am extremely careful about my diet, quite as much for the care of my teeth as for my complexion.

Why Women Hate Saying "Yes" and "No"

By Elizabeth Eldridge.

NO woman ever willingly burned her bridges behind her. Plain "Yes" or "No" do not belong to the feminine vocabulary. They are, to her, little hard, round bullets fit for nothing but masculine firearms. She revels in cloud effects, in tulle with all its hazy indefiniteness, in veils, suggestive of wings and webs and the things dreams are made of. If a woman uses a short, crisp "Yes" or "No" it almost unsexes her. "Isn't she masculine?" we say, when one of our sex snips off her decisions between two sharp, thin lips in scissors fashion.

A woman never swallows her tea at one gulp. She toys with her teacup and sips her tea in the same indirect fashion that a cat makes way with a mouse.

The trains on women's dresses probably owe their existence to the long, last, lingering farewell which woman bestows upon her skirt. She does so hate to end things abruptly—rather lets them trail off into indefiniteness and end, if end they must, gradually and imperceptibly. Tailored effects never have been the true expression of a woman's soul. They have been forced upon her by a utilitarian age.

All those little tendrils of her make-up which want to twine about every color and every line and every effect have been bruised and torn by being forced into the straight, black-and-white finality of a tailored suit.

It would never have been a woman's idea to divide the sheep from the goats. She would be haunted by a vague fear that the sheep might miss the goats, or that the goats might miss the sheep. Who knows but she may be preparing new troubles for herself by demanding the ballot, for she will no sooner place a cross in front of one name on the ticket than all the other names will begin to plead powerfully with her to be restored to favor.

Imagine the turmoil stirred up in a woman's mind by a male voice asking brusquely over the telephone: "Do you want to go to the theatre to-night? Say 'Yes' or 'No.'" It opens all the floodgates of her imagination.

Of course she wants to go—but why to-night, perhaps some other night would do better. And oh! isn't there some one with whom she can discuss what she is going to wear? No. There sits that obdurate male at the other end of the wire and gives her only the unlovely alternative of a "Yes" or "No."

All the latent garrulity in her nature is aroused. She feels she could debate either side of the question with equal fluency, but is given to understand that the debate is closed, and a decision must be rendered. It is positive torture!

What woman wants to shop if all hope of a strategic retreat has been cut off? She chooses the rose-colored gown with her eyes open, but no sooner does she do this than the blue gown and the cream gown and the wistaria gown and all the other gowns join hands and perform a witches' dance about her, alluring her with their color, dazzling her with their beauty, pointing at her rose-colored gown in derision, until she begins to doubt the wisdom of her choice and wants to exchange it. "Exchange it. Of course you can exchange it," says the shopping world, for when, before this war started, has this world of barter refused to bow before the catholicity of a woman's mind?

Having lived so long in the temperate zone of "If," "But," "About," "Perhaps," "I'll see," it gives a woman an awful chill to be struck by a man's frigid blast of "Yes" or "No." It's like playing see-saw and having some one jump off one end and let you flop to the ground.

Sometimes "Yes" has almost as deadly an effect as "No" on a woman who has carefully mapped out a long campaign to bring the male mind to terms. She had intended to open up with his favorite dish for dinner. Advancing under this barrage she has been prepared to coax, cajole, make concessions and promises and finally resort to tears to gain her point, but this unaccountable man upsets her whole campaign by a short, decisive, irrefutable "Yes" as soon as she proffers her request.

Perhaps she ought to feel pleased. She has her request, but what is she to do with all this stored-up ammunition, with all this acquired momentum? The fort has surrendered without firing a gun, and she had laid in provisions for a long siege. It was the one move for which her feminine tactics had not prepared her, and it had almost succeeded in turning her victory into defeat.

It is this dislike of clear-cut issues that makes a woman's farewell seem like a graduation. You thought you had finished something when you were graduated, but instead the speaker of the occasion assured you that you had just started something. So it is when a woman says "good-by."

Beauty's Question Box

WON'T you please tell me how to reduce my cheeks without reducing the rest of the body?—M. B.

It will be necessary for you to massage this superfluous flesh away. With a pure, greaseless massage cream into which you have dipped the first, second and third fingers of each hand, rub the cheek muscles slowly and gently with a rotary motion upward and backward along the line of the jaw, upward to the hair line. Repeat this operation again and again until the cheek muscles and the fingers are weary. It will help also to pass a small lump of ice over the cheeks before retiring always with the upward stroke.

WILL you please tell me what to do to prevent my nose and face from getting shiny? Just about half an hour after I put powder on it gets very oily and greasy.—A. E. F.

Try dusting your skin with this powder:

Bicarbonate of soda	2 ounces
Pulverized orris root	1 ounce
Pulverized spermaceti	1 dram

Mix thoroughly and keep in a dry place.

If the above does not correct the trouble than you might try an astringent lotion made up of one ounce of tincture of benzoin and a half a pint of alcohol. Apply this to the face several times daily, allowing the mixture to dry on.

MY nose is too fat and I would like it made smaller. How can I do it?—D. D.

Try massaging your nose daily with the following absorbent remedy, which will have a tendency to melt down the superfluous flesh that annoys you so greatly:

Camphor water	2 ounces
Iodide of potassium	2 ounces
Alcohol	2 ounces

Household Hints

Spreadless Ink.

HANDKERCHIEFS that are to be marked with indelible ink should be starched and ironed first in order to prevent the ink spreading.

For Colored Dresses.

EVEN the most delicate shades of colored materials will not fade or run if a teaspoonful of Epsom salts is added to each gallon of water when washing or rinsing them.

Painting the Hammock.

A DIRTY hammock can be made to look like new by applying a simple coat of paint. Be sure to select some color that will harmonize well with your veranda furnishings.

A Time-Saver.

IN using the gas oven open the door wide for a second two or three minutes after lighting the burner. This will allow a quantity of moist air to escape, and as a result the oven will heat much more quickly.

PLEASE let me know how I can make myself taller. I was sick for a long time and stopped growing too soon.—L. C.

Stretch your body every day. For a stretching of all the muscles the best exercise I know is to clench the fists, and, raising the arms, with elbows unbent, above the head, rise to your tip-toes and stretch the body to its greatest possible height. Do this many times a day. Always sit erect, stand erect and walk erect. Make this a habit and you will add several inches to your height. Build up your bodily health with plenty of wholesome, nourishing food and never fail to take a certain amount of exercise every day out of doors.

CAN you tell me what causes blackheads and enlarged pores? Also, how can I cure them,—ANNA F.

They may result from so many different causes that individual treatment must be adjusted to individual needs. Only extreme measures will relieve an aggravated case of blackheads or acne. With a flesh brush dipped into a lather made of warm water and castile soap rub the afflicted part of the face vigorously every night. Afterward apply this simple remedy:

Salicylic acid	50 grams
Pure lard	50 grams

Then you can close the pores by the daily use of this astringent preparation:

Camphor water	1 pint
Pure glycerine	½ ounce
Borax	¼ ounce

Some "Different" Vegetable Recipes

By Mary Lee Swann,
The Well-Known Writer and Lecturer on Cooking.

Potato Balls.

MIX 1½ cups mashed potato with a little grated cheese and salt and pepper to taste. Fold in 4 or 5 well-beaten eggs. Shape into balls and fry to a delicate brown in hot fat. Garnish with crisp parsley.

Creamed Carrots.

WASH, scrape and slice one dozen tender young carrots. Cook with 1½ cups water, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon sugar and salt to taste. Cover and cook until soft. Beat 1 or 2 egg yolks, add ½ cup milk or cream and add to carrots. Season to taste with salt, paprika and a little finely chopped parsley.

Quick Potato Souffle.

PRESS boiled potatoes through potato ricer. Beat until creamy. To 2½ cups of the potato add 1¼ cups white stock (chicken or veal stock), 1 whole egg and 1 egg yolk, 1½ tablespoon cream or melted butter and salt and pepper to taste. A dash of nutmeg or a little finely minced parsley may be added. Beat well with a dover egg beater, pour into buttered baking dish. Sprinkle lightly with grated American or Parmesan cheese and bake in a moderate oven about 35 minutes.

Asparagus Cooked with Carrots

SLICE tender young carrots which have been scraped and boiled. Cut into small pieces cooked asparagus. Measure and allow equal amounts of carrots and asparagus. Cover with good white stock, season to taste and heat slowly. Thicken with egg yolk diluted with a little stock. Rich milk may be substituted for stock.

O'Brien Potatoes.

DICE potatoes and fry 3 cups of the dice in deep fat. Drain on unglazed paper and sprinkle with salt. Cook 1 tablespoon chopped onion in 2 tablespoons butter until soft and yellow. Remove onion or leave it, as desired. Add 2 or 3 finely chopped pimientoes to the butter and heat. Add the potatoes, mix well and reheat. Turn out on serving dish and sprinkle with finely chopped parsley.

Broiled Tomatoes.

CUT large tomatoes into 3 or 4 slices, crosswise. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, dip in bread crumbs, slightly beaten egg and crumbs again. Place on a well-oiled broiler and broil 8 or 10 minutes.

Fried Eggplant.

PARE and slice eggplant. Dry and dip each slice in slightly beaten egg, diluted with a little water, bread crumbs and grated cheese. Fry in plenty of hot fat until a delicate brown. Serve with savory sauce.

Boiled Onions.

WASH and peel one dozen small onions. Brown them in a little butter or other fat. Sprinkle sparingly with salt and pepper and ½ teaspoon sugar. When delicately browned add 1½ cups white or brown stock, cover and simmer gently until tender.

Stuffed Squash.

CUT squash in halves, crosswise, and scoop out centre. Steam until tender and chop fine. Add 1 cup finely chopped chicken or veal and 1 cup bread crumbs. Season to taste with salt, paprika and a few drops of onion juice. Moisten with a little rich milk. Tie squash together and place in a square of cheesecloth. Tie securely and cook until tender in white stock or water.

Stuffed Tomatoes.

SCOOP out the centres from 8 tomatoes, sprinkle the inside of them with salt and invert. Chop centres and cook until soft with 2 tablespoons butter, 1 finely chopped onion, 2 finely chopped slices breakfast bacon and salt and pepper to taste. A pinch of bayleaf, parsley or clove may be added if a stronger flavor is desired. Add ¾ cup bread crumbs and mix well. Fill the tomato shells with this mixture. Sprinkle with bread crumbs and grated cheese and bake in a moderate oven about 30 minutes.

Woman's Club Mothers' Department Hears Lecture On Care Of Children

Paper Is Read By Mrs. D. D. Patterson At Meeting Yesterday; Mrs. C. C. Landis Reviews Timely Book; Future Sessions Will Be Open To Chinese Ladies Interested

Chinese women who are interested in the study of child welfare are to be invited to attend the meetings of the Mother's Department of the American Woman's Club. At the meeting of the club held yesterday morning at the Carlton Cafe, Mrs. F. R. Sites urged that the department meetings be open to Chinese women and her suggestion was enthusiastically received.

The meeting yesterday, which was conducted by Mrs. W. G. Hiltner, was well attended and a worth while program given. Mrs. C. C. Landis gave a comprehensive review of Holt's and Griffith's book on "Care and Feeding," after which Mrs. Don Patterson read a paper of interest on "Preventive Care Of Children."

Mrs. Patterson said in part:

SUBJECT IS WIDE

The human organism in its various stages of development presents such a complex study that no one human mind is ever able to grasp it in its entirety. Physicians who spend years as specialists often find symptoms which baffle them, peculiarities that have never before manifested themselves and conditions that are new. For these reasons it is not possible for anyone making only a short study of the preventive care of children to do any more than deal in generalities and often, with those things which seem most obvious.

It seems to be popular fallacy that every woman is equipped by instinct and intuition for motherhood and the care of her children. We see the instinctive care given to small animals by their mothers and it is probably from this observation that this widespread belief arises. Writing in "The Care of the Baby," Dr. Crozier Griffith, takes issue with this viewpoint as follows:

"The fact is that such a little animal slight though its needs are when compared with a baby, has a parent which by instinct is far better able to care for it than is the human mother for her child. That she knows nothing is both the mother's safeguard and her danger. Ready and anxious as she is to fit herself for her new duties she is even by this anxiety rendered too ready to accept as gospel all that is told her about the care of her infant by anyone who assumes to know, but who "darkenth counsel by words without knowledge! She becomes thus a sufferer from 'old wives' fables and from all sort of gratuitious advice, the injuriousness of which is shown too late in the condition of the unhappy child."

BATHING THE CHILD

"It is hardly necessary to even mention the matter of bathing a child as almost every mother of a child or infant over three weeks old has had the instructions of her physician and her own experience as a guide. Keeping records of weight and length are fascinating but are not always an accurate guide to the condition of the child, for despite the fact that many tables and mathematical formulaes have been devised for determining what the average should be the variation in different children is too large for any set rules to be followed. The majority of babies who are artifically fed often gain rapidly in weight but do not keep pace with this development in strength and resistence.

Probably the greatest panaceas against diseases and disorders in children are fresh air, sleep and exercise. The lack of these may be traced as the primary cause for most of the nervousness manifested by children both in infancy and in youth. Fresh air has been given to us by Nature as a preventative and a health builder and it should be utilised by every mother as such. Too often children are not permitted to take enough fresh air because of unsettled or chilly weather and if they are their clothing is too heavy and cumbersome to permit them to receive any benefit from it.

"Sleep has been called Nature's Restorative, and if mothers would insist upon their children having naps in the open air they would find oftentimes that a child who is cross and irritable would be more even tempered and have a more sunny disposition. Such children who have had their bodily resistance built up by such a step are also less prone to disease. In the matter of exercise there is no fixed schedule that can be accepted as a standard.

"Exercise must be suited to the child, its peculiarities, its likes and dislikes and to its environment.

ROLE OF THE NURSERY

"The nursery plays a large role in the life of a small child and should therefore be given a great deal of consideration and thought. It should first be well ventilated and sunny. Its decorations should be in bright and attractive colors and so designed as to stimulate the child's imagination for in so doing the mother is adding a stimulus to the development of her offspring's senses. Playthings should also be selected with care and should have an educational as well as a amusement value.

"Since the study of the development of the senses covers such a field, it cannot be dealt with in this discussion. However, those who wish to go into it fully are recommended to read a book entitled "Essentials of Child Study," by G. W. A. Luckey, from the library of the Mothers' Club, in which a chapter is devoted to each of the senses with references and personal observations.

"Following in logical succession upon fresh air, exercise and sleep comes the consideration of the child's diet. The matter of the selection of foods is also a variable quantity that must be carefully worked out for each individual child. Every person, large or small, needs a certain amount of proteid, carbohydrates, starchy foods and mineral matter but in just what form these can be best taken is a question to be decided by the mother who is constantly observing the effects of different articles of food on the child's digestion and general health.

DISCUSSES MALNUTRITION

"A subject that is causing widespread discussion among physicians, baby specialists and the public is malnutrition. The very fact that it has been found hundreds of thousands of children in the United States are undernourished indicates the importance of the consideration that is now being given to this phase of a child's health and development. In a community where the standard of intelligence is high, such as Shanghai, malnutrition is a negligible quantity but it is assumed that every mother is not only interested in her own child but also in all other children who comes to her notice and it is this reason that an exhaustive treatment of the subject is given here. The subject of malnutrition is admirably covered in a pamphlet, 'What is Malnutrition?' by Lydia Roberts, published by the Children's Bureau of the U.S. Department of Labor.

"It is often a prevalent belief, although the idea is becoming less prominent among mothers, that the best method of bringing a child through the earlier stages of its life to the robust health of youth to allow them to contract all of the so-called diseases of childhood and get them over with. This has been a dangerous undertaking at the best and no child should be subjected to the ordeal for there is no reason why it is necessary for them to have all of the diseases listed under the category of childhood. It is unnecessary to warn against not permitting a child to associate with children exposed to disease or to permit older members of the child's family to come in contact with them. For one or two diseases there are vaccinations, but in this the attending physician is always careful to take the necessary precautions by adminstering them.

SIGNS OF ILLNESS

"There are certain well defined and easily recognisable signs of illness in children that may be taken as warnings that a physician should be consulted. A loss of appetite occurs in fevers and stomach disorder. Open mouths or dilated nostrils during sleep always show impaired respiration. Flushed face may show fever and blue lips disturbed circulation. Vomiting and spitting up soon as taking food may be due to tight an abdominal binder, too much handling or too frequent feeding, too rich food, but it also may indicate dyspesia or the onset of infectious diseases. Frequent yawning may be a fore-runner of malaria. Extreme drowsiness often precedes infectious fevers.

What to do in emergencies should be common knowledge with every mother. There are certain things which can be done for immediate relief of the child before the arrival of a physician. These preparations vary for the diseases or ailments contracted and each has its own methods. Every mother should know how to bandage and care for burns, bruises, scratches, cuts and those minor accidents of a healthy and well regulated childhood. An excellent discussion of emergency treatments may be found in 'Our Baby' by Dr. Ralph Oakley Clock.

An excellent idea for the preparation for emergencies is expressed in the following taken from "The Care of the Baby," by Dr. J. P. Crosier Griffith:

MEDICINE CHEST

"In the sickroom or in the nursery there should be a medicine chest or wall closet and here should be placed such remedies and appliances as a mother is justified in using herself. No dangerous medicine should be placed in this closet except under special precautions. Bottles containing poisons, or any fluid to be used externally, should never be placed here unless of such a nature that they be recognised readily even in the dark. If this precaution is not followed some dreadful accident may happen. A modern device is a 'poison bottle,' consisting of a moulded bottles with points projecting after the fashion of cut glass. The dangerous nature of the contents is perceived the moment the hand touches it.

"Do not keep all the half-used medicines remaining from what the doctor has ordered at various times. A few of them might be of service in the future, but the majority were good only for the occasion when ordered. Do not forget to keep the closet locked and the key in a safe but accessible place. Many children with a fondness for playing doctor have seriously drugged a younger member of the family, as a result of the neglect of this precaution.

"This brief and general talk though somewhat inadequate, may cover the broader phases of the preventive care of children. Prevention means largely the building up of the bodily resistance of the child so that diseases may be warded off or easily cured when contracted. With the aid of fresh air, exercise, sleep and properly selected food this should be possible with every normal child. As there are many mothers here whose children have passed through the stages which this discussion has aimed to cover, those from infancy to seven or eight years, it would be interesting to have their views and observations in preventive care."

MAINWARING

Mainwaring. By Maurice Hewlett. New York: Dodd, Mead and Co.

From the first paragraph in which Maurice Hedlett introduces Richard Denzil Blaise Mainwaring, a meteor-like genius, "who could drive men like sheep down steep places into the sea," the central figure of the English writer's latest novel becomes more of a reality to the reader than half the flesh-and-blood people with whom he comes in daily contact. The author's portrait of the selfish soul of Damn-to-Blazes Mainwaring, to give him the sobriquet in which he exulted, grips the imagination so hard that it is impossible to think of him as a creature of printed paper. Lean as a Winter wolf, with his tossing black forelock and burning glance, Mainwaring's physical person fills the mind's eye as completely as his dominant personality fascinates the attention. Fearing neither God nor man, knowing no law higher than his own pleasure, this self-seeking blaguer of Mr. Hewlett's creation compels unwilling admiration by the sheer audacity of his words and actions. In this he is blood brother to Frank Carville, that abnormal tornado of unmoral force who tears his destructive path like a human cloudburst through the pages of William McFee's "Aliens."

Mainwaring starts his career as the champion of working men, whose cause he betrays and upon whose backs he climbs to high places. Throughout the book he remains ruthlessly contemptuous of all human obligations, financial, social and spiritual. It is his dominating will that never acknowledges the possibility of failure and his flamelike eloquence, compounded of high-handed arrogance, devilry, mockery and malice, that carries him upward and still upward in policies. He simply will not be denied any prize he sets his heart upon, no matter how many lives he has to ride over roughshod to reach the goal of his vaulting ambitions.

His lowly born wife, epitome of the elemental nesting woman, who knows no law of being except duty, is the first victim of his egocentric character. She refuses to rise with her husband because she believes that the world into which he would lift her is a dishonest world, and that her position in it would be a false one. Humbly she relegates herself to the position of servant in the house where she would not be mistress—and mainwaring makes no protest. He will let nothing stand between him and the destiny for which he feels himself cut out.

The first-person narrator of the story, who is the mouthpiece of Mr. Hewlett's own philosophy, falls honorably in love with Mainwarning's wife. In his eyes she stands for Hestia, Godness of the Hearth, whose beauty, modesty and truth personify the moral law. But such qualities cannot, of course, long hold the non-moral being to whom she is married. Mainwaring pays open court to the Countess Whitehaven, who, unhappy woman, although in love with another man is equally unwilling and unable to lose Mainwaring.

The sharp contrasts between these well-drawn figures, whose souls are silhouetted by the tragic circumstances in which the author places them, afford Mr. Hewlett equal opportunity to display his powers of creating and analysing character. The artistry and dignity of the story he has written around them make "Mainwaring" a worthy addition to the novels bearing his name.

Since Mr. Hewlett has chosen to present the destructive type of man in the garments of a demagogue, and because he so repeatedly stresses that character's eloquence and his Janus-like dealings with labor, it will not be surprising if enemies of Lloyd George find it convenient to ignore or discount the fact that the novel is a study of life in the Victorian 80's and please themselves by reading into the author's vivid portrait a likeness to the character and career of the English Premier.

Hessville's Schoolmaster

Remy de Gourmont reduced the possible dramatic situations, which an industrious man had decided were thirty-odd in number, to four—man's relation to God, to nature, to the opposite sex, and to himself. Mrs. Martin's latest book in general concerns itself with the third of these classifications—with man's relation to the opposite sex. John Wimmer, the schoolmaster of Hessville, finds himself passionately in love with Irene Laub, of a coarse fibre, and yet thrown in contact with Minnie Maus, a Menonite and his subordinate in the school. His struggles with himself because of the terrible position into which he is thrown—his marriage to Minnie—are made realistic largely because of the Pennsylvania Dutch setting in which they occur.

Not alone are the main characters well drawn, even the most minor minion is unforgettably sketched. The author has studied children and has thoroughly expressed her understanding of them. What they say is obviously taken from life.

"The Schoolmaster of Hessville" has its difficulties in covering a great length of time. One chapter lightly ends with an incident six years away from that with which it began. Yet this is a pardonable technicality in view of the fact that Mrs. Martin had added a patient observation and fertile invention to an acute understanding of human nature.

'NO CLUE!'

"No Clue!" By James Hay, Jr. New York: Dodd, Mead & Co.

Publishers and public alike seem to set a standard for detective stories comparatively lower than for any other form of fiction, despite the fact that, of all stories, the detective yarn demands of its author a minimum of literary skill. A simple narrative style, no better than is required of the newspaper reporter, suffices his purposes. And as far as plot building is concerned, the author always plays with cards stacked by himself.

As a consequence of the low standards bemoaned above, the majority of detective stories being published today make dismal reading for any one of discrimination. There's something artificial about them; they're as much alike as a dozen cut-out puzzles all made by the same manufacturer. And they bear about the same relation to literature that photography does to oil painting.

"No Clue!" by James Hay, Jr., comes fairly under this blanket indictment. It is no better and no worse than the general run of detective stories that will stand beside it on the booksellers' shelves. Its author's faults are typical of contemporary detective fiction.

Of these faults, the most glaring is Mr. Hay's failure to arouse interest in his automaton-like characters. He fulfills the conventions set forth by the text-books on fiction writing—that is, he "sustains suspense" and leads logically to a denouement that takes the reader by surprise—but his ingenuity is wasted; the reader does not care who is finally proved to be the murdered and who the unjustly suspected hero; none of the characters has any particular place in his sympathies; they are all simply mechanical pieces in the author's artificial puzzle.

WANG

Wang. By B. L. Putnam Weale. New York: Dodd, Mead and Co.

This fascinating story, written for boys and girls of all ages, is the account of the childhood of Wang, an eighth child, called Wang the Ninth, because the word for eight in Chinese is very ill-omened. He is precociously shrewd and strong; when you add to this that he is a dreamer, all the elements for a delightful story are at hand. Wang's father is Ten Li Hamlet is a blacksmith; when the mother elopes, at a time of famine, with another blacksmith, the father sets out with the baby boy for the distant capital. They arrive, and Wang becomes a city urchin, a leader of his fellows, and adventure after adventure follows. Wang's perilous trip through the interior of China is told with fidelity and beauty; he has his full share of queue-breadth 'scapes, but at last finds the relief force. And now a greater risk is exacted of him—they sent him back with a message to the beleaguered garrison. This time he is caught, is tied up as a target before the guns of the white devils within the stockaded foreign quarter, and—The reviewer should not stop here, for the book does not. No. Wang is not killed. At the last moment his life is providentially saved. And this ends a highly interesting book, worth while both, for its story element and for the faithful picture of the humble inner life of the great sleeping empire off in the yellow West.

YOUTH IN HARLEY

Youth In Harley. By Gordon Hall Gerould. Charles Scribner's Sons.

Mrs. Katherine Fullerton Gerould possesses a husband, and that husband has determined to make himself heard. In "Youth in Harley" he makes himself heard to some purpose and displays himself as a serious novelist intent on illuminating contemporary American life. Mrs. Gerould's stories have established themselves as among the best being written in America today, and she has accomplished this through an intensive study of humanity. She may be called a realist in the best sense of the word, a writer who never strains to secure points and who observes the life about her most meticulously for the material of her themes. Mr. Gerould is traveling the same pathway. Whether or not the influence of his wife is perceptible in his tales makes no difference. He does accomplish what he sets out to do in an extremely praiseworthy manner. He, too, is a realist, one of those quiet, receptive realists who can take an everyday scene and make it live for the reader.

"Youth in Harley" is a story of New England life. It narrates the existence of a young college graduate in a small town, where he goes to take up duties as Principal of the solitary school there. His position brings him into touch with all the important personages in Harley and, some not so important. Each characterisation is carefully worked out by Mr. Gerould into a finished and living creature, and by the time the book is finished the reader possesses in his mind's eyes a gallery of living people who typify for him life at its best in New England. Besides the depiction of the town and the people in it, Stephen Quaid has to work out his own destiny. Love plays its part in the story, and the various episodes that arise exhibit the molding of his own character as well as those who come in contact with him.

The writers who treat New England truthfully and skillfully are few. Such people as Mary E. Wilkins Freeman and Harriet Prescott Spofford stand out, and it is among this group that Mr. Gerould has decidedly earned a place. Perhaps nowhere in America is life so seemingly simple, yet underneath so complex, as in New England. Old England has its influence there and so, too, has the puritanic consciousness that has been handed down from early days. People there have mellowed more surely into the soil. It has become home in a sense that hardly obtains in other portions of America. Dealing with a clearly defined type. Mr. Gerould makes it a point to emphasise none of the time-honored anachronisms that writers shove into works to give them New England color. In "Youth in Harley" he has evidently studied his people at close hand, taken the entire atmosphere of a town and recreated it for the reader. The result is a novel that is always pleasant to the reader.

The action is slow at times, and readers who desire plot above all and breathlessness while reading will hardly feel themselves wholly in sympathy with the book. It is, first of all, an effort in characterization, and in this field Mr. Gerould is always successful. For readers who desire to taste the quality of excellent writing at their leisure "Youth in Harley" is to be recommended.

THE ALMONDS OF LIFE

The Almonds Of Life. By F. E. Mills Young. George H. Doran Company.

In her new novel, "The Almonds of Life," Miss F. E. Mills Young repeats the familiar tale of the beautiful, gay and unloving young wife, the staid, dull, middle-aged and devoted husband, and the man who, having been the middle-aged husband's friend, becomes the young wife's lover. In this particular version of the age-old story the lover is himself married and the father of two children. But no consideration either of honor or of duty has any restraining effect upon the ardor of the pair, who, after deceiving their respective partners for a time, run away together, and presently discover, when it is too late, that to grasp at happiness is not to win and hold it.

The book is smoothly written, but it has no especial charm of style, nor any particular quality either of discernment or of drama to freshen its more than well-worn plot. The proofreading is strikingly careless.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is particularly a preparation for Infants and Children made agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach and pleasant in its action. It has been in use for over thirty years and has always been one of the most highly esteemed of all cathartic preparations. It has one great advantage over other preparations of its kind in that while it opens the organs readily and completely, it does not have a tendency to produce subsequent constipation so much to be dreaded.

It was only after years of research in the fields of herbs and roots for a combination of purely vegetable matter that would have all the virtues of Castor Oil, without its disagreeable, nauseating properties, especially when used for infants or children, that the formula used in Fletcher's Castoria was found, and which for over 30 years has proven its worth. Try it.

Save the Babies.

Infantry mortality is something frightful. We can hardly realise that of all the children born in ivilised countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one quarter die before they reach one year, thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one half before they are fifteen! We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestion, sickness, death. To avoid any possibility of giving your child opiates, or narcotics of any kind, keep Fletcher's Castoria in the house, and Save the Babies.

Little Hsu And Wang I-tang In Plot, Is Belief

was given that all communications between the Anfu-ites and the outside world should be restricted, and that the latter would be warned to refrain from political activities

The note asks the reason for the long interval between the escape of "Little Hsu" and the notification to the Chinese Government. The note further requests the Legation to hand over the remaining eight Anfu-ites, in view of the apparent inability of the Legation Guard to prevent their escape.

The Ching Pao asserts that Hsu Shu-tseng's escape was arranged by General Higashi. The former, it is stated, left Peking with a party of Japanese soldiers, wearing a Japanese uniform.

A report is current in Chinese official circles that the Government contemplates asking for the recall of a prominent Japanese military official, who is suspected of being closely connected with the Anfu movement in July, and returned to Peking shortly before the escape of Hsu Shu-tseng.

Elections To Be Held By 1912 Law

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Nov. 17.—A Mandate is issued this evening, instructing the provincial authorities to prepare for local self-government. Another Mandate contains a notification that the forthcoming election will be conducted under the law of 1912, but it does not fix the date.

A PRESENT FROM NATURE

Moreover, what is Nature? It is that from which all creation springs. When things lose this Principle they die: when they receive it they are born. If man, in acting, run counter to it, they fail, if they comply with it, they succeed. Wherefore drop your silly prejudices and turn to Nature. From among its lofty mountains, covered with eternal snow, it offers you its product:—A TIBETAN FOX SKIN. Send $25.—(Chinese Post Office Money Order) to MR. ELLY WIDLER, TATSIENLU, SZECHWAN PROVINCE, and by return mail he will forward one of these specially selected TIBETAN FOX SKINS.

Demonstration At Peking Against Hangchun Terms

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Nov. 17.—Some 5,000 students, of whom one-third were girls, have been holding demonstrations today at the Presidency and Waichiaopu, urging the Government not to give way regarding the Japanese claims as to Hungchun. The proceedings were quite orderly.

LEPROSY FUNDS SOUGHT

Bill For Appropriation To Combat Disease In Philippines

Manila, November 1.—A bill to appropriate 1,000,000 pesos for the purpose of curing leprosy in the Philippines has been introduced in the House of Representatives here.

Refined chaulmoogra oil, which is also reported to be effective in the treatment of tuberculosis, will be used in combatting the disease, according to health officials, if the legislature makes the appropriation. Advocates of the new treatment criticise severely a proposal recently made to cut the appropriation to 200,000 pesos, which they declare is not enough to attempt a systematic campaign against leprosy.

The lepers are sympathising with the plight of the famine sufferers in China. A number of lepers confined in San Lazaro Hospital here recently collected

FULL-BLOODED PEOPLE

Why Other People Like Them

We can all call to mind men and women who give such a sense of vitality and strength that they are bound to get on. A woman of this type—full-blooded, plump and bright eyed—always has lots of friends. A man of the same kind always gets his own way.

The reason is that there is a natural and wholesome tendency in all of us to appreciate health and healthy people, those with vigorous red blood in their veins, instead of thin watery bloodlessness. Often we remark that we envy them their vitality and keen interest in the affairs of life.

There is no need for envy if the bloodless delicate ones will pay attention to health and make good their deficiency of blood. There is sound advice in the suggestion that all such ailing men and women should begin without delay a course of Dr. Williams' pink pills for pale people, for the reason that these pills make the good red blood of health and give the high spirits, energy and attraction that go with it. If you are pale, anaemic and nervous now, these pills will pull you up. The first promising sign will be a natural healthy appetite; then the headaches, feeling of weariness and aching in the limbs will disappear, and your nerves will become steady.

Now is the time to begin Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Get a supply from any dealer: or direct and post free, $1.50 the bottle, $8/- for six bottles, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

Harding's Election Disturbs Filipinos

Manila, November 7.—The Filipinos, generally speaking, are disappointed at the result of the Presidential election, but they profess to believe that the Republicans are pledged to grant the Philippines independence.

The Legislature passed a resolution of congratulation to President-Elect Harding.

A new Independence Mission, under Manuel Quezon, is likely to sail in January to attend the inauguration of the new President of the United States, which takes place March 4.

Fiume Forces In Corsica Victory

(U. S. Naval Radio)

Paris, Nov. 16.—According to a Rome despatch, the forces under the command of General Gabriel d'Annunzio, possess the entire coast from Mount Luban to a part east of Fiume and have occupied all districts of Corsica. They were practically unopposed by the inhabitants.

AMERICANS HAVE NEVER WON FROM AUSSY RACKETERS

following year Brookes and Wilding proved too much for Maurice E. McLoughlin and M. H. Long, the Australians making a clean sweep of five matches. Two years later Brookes, R. W. Heath and A. W. Dunlop again won five matches in a row in the challenge round, defeating the team composed of Wright, McLoughlin and William A. Larned.

The last time the Americans and Australians met in a challenge round was in the 1914 event at the West Side Tennis Club of Forest Hills, when the United States team that had won the trophy from England the previous year was outscored three matches to two. McLoughlin won both his matches with Brookes and Wilding, but R. Norris Williams failed to win either of his singles, while in doubles Brookes and Wilding beat McLoughlin and Bundy.

This is the first year for Johnston, Tilden and Washburn in international tennis play. Johnston and Tilden both hold victories over Gerald L. Patterson, who is regarded as the leading singles player in Australia, while Washburn forced Patterson to five hard sets to win in the national championship of 1919.

Johnston scored over Patterson in the semi-finals of the championship last year and Tilden defeated Brookes in the same tournament. Tilden's triumph over Patterson came in the challenge round of the British championship this summer. In that match he outplayed Patterson decisively.

Yokohama To Have Modern Quarantine

New Station Will Be Built At Port—Result In Saving Time When Vessels Dock

The port of Yokohama will in the near future have a new quarantine station which will compare favorably with the best stations in other parts of the world. The Nagahama station is to be completely rebuilt on modern lines. An appropriation of half a million yen has been made for this purpose and work will commence in the spring.

The present station was built more than 35 years ago and in many respects is out of date. The Kanagawa health authorities have just completed a thorough study of the best quarantine stations in foreign countries, as well as laboratories and other equipment. New quarters will be erected for patients, fumigating plants are to be remodeled, and a thoroughly modern medical laboratory will be added to the station.

The need for improvement is being felt more and more every year with the increase of shipping. Better facilities there will serve to lessen the time required for examination of passengers and crews of vessels coming from infected ports.

T.K.K. UNDECIDED ON DAIREN MOVE

Rumored Change Of Steamers From Japanese Port Of Call Is Being Considered

The plan of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha to change the route of its passenger steamers to Dairen is far from being realised and it is not considered likely that the change will be made soon. Mr. Wuriu of the T.K.K. head office said that when the proposition was first made the company did not take into consideration the fact that opposition would develop. It will now be necessary to go into the matter more thoroughly and decide whether or not the proposed change will be practicable.

The city of Nagasaki is one of the strongest opponents of the move and the mayor has been in Tokio to lay his case before the government. The T.K.K. steamers are the most profitable to Nagasaki of any line that calls there as they take on a greater amount of coal in addition to taking the bulk of their other supplies from there.

TO TEST COAL

Officials of the T.K.K. are preparing to make exhaustive tests of the steaming qualities of Dairen coal in order to determine the relative qualities of that with Nagasaki coal. If these tests show a difference sufficient to offset the loss of business which will come from cutting out the call at Nagasaki, caused by retaliation of city officials, the company will endeavor to secure government permission to change the route. If, on the other hand, Dairen coal proves to be inferior in quality and the saving small, the matter of change will be abandoned.

Mr. Wuriu believes that the Nagasaki coal companies will take steps to reduce the present cost of coal in order to make an inducement for steamers to call there. Competition among steamship companies is becoming very keen and it is necessary to retrench in every possible way in order to meet the moves of competitors. Those who furnish supplies are aware of this and it is to their own interest to assist in every way.

Bunker Restrictions Withdrawn By Britain

Supplies Plentiful On Thames And Mersey, Says Despatch To Tokio British Embassy

The British Embassy in Tokio has received the following message regarding the withdrawal of restrictions on the bunkering of ships at British ports:

"Owing to the end of the coal strike, emergency restrictions on bunkers will be withdrawn forthwith. Bunker coal is therefore now available for all foreign ships as far as local stocks permit. Supplies are plentiful on the Thames and the Mersey, but some short time must elapse before stocks on the Humber and in Scotch ports can be replenished. Coal exports will be resumed as soon as miners have definitely returned to work."

New Conference To Set Japan-India Rates

Meeting In Yokohama Fixes Charges On Silk Shipments

A new freight conference has been organised covering cargo from Japanese ports to India. The N.Y.K., O.S.K. and P. and O. lines are in the new combination and have agreed to make material reductions in rates to Calcutta and Bombay. The object of the conference is to stimulate trade between Japan and India to offset the heavy decline in shipments from Europe and America.

The final agreement was made in Yokohama and the new rates go into effect at once. The meeting at Yokohama fixed the rates on silk and silk goods. Rates on other commodities were previously settled at conferences in Kobe and Osaka.

The old rate on silk was three percent of the value of the goods. This has now been reduced to two and a half percent ad valorem with a minimum rate of Y90 for habutai. The rate on waste silk has been cut from Y60 to Y50 per ton. The reduction for other articles amounts to approximately Y1 per ton.

Silver And Exchange

In their report dated November 17, Messrs. Maitland, Fearon and Brand write as follows:

Exchange:—The London price of Silver has declined 2¾d. to 51d since our last circular. With a good demand for Gold Remittances and little cover our exchange rates are down 4d. to 570d. At the close the market is firm the result, at present, of profit taking by our local Gold dealers. The drop brought out very little export paper and exports still remain very dull.

Our stocks of Silver are reported as follows:

Sycee and Bar Silver, Tls. 34,970,000 an increase of Tls. 300,000. Chinese and Mexican Dollars, $27,360,000 unchanged. Estimated value in Taels 54,900,000. Stock of silver on November 19 1919, Taels 28,827,000.

What Next?

WITH the fall of Sebastopol, the whole Crimean Peninsula comes into the hands of the Russian Red armies. And the remnants of the fine army which General Wrangel, with the assistance of France, had created, have been dispersed or have surrendered. This leaves the Red armies free for operations in other directions and poses a most serious problem for the Allies.

Are these armies now to be sent down through Turkey towards Mesopotamia and Afghanistan? A dispatch which we published in Tuesday's paper reported that the Bolsheviki had effected an agreement with the Armenians and the Turks whereby they were to be granted a corridor for the passage of their troops. But whether the Moscow government will perceive anything of a profitable nature in such an enterprise remains to be seen.

Great Britain apparently is preparing to withdraw her troops from Mesopotamia, and the threat of Bolshevist activities there on a larger scale, coupled with the implied menace to the peace of India, probably would merely lead to a reversal of the British policy and a stiffening of the British military front in that region.

Furthermore, it would arouse indignation throughout the British Empire. One result would be the breaking off of the present negotiations between the British and the Russians for the resumption of trade relations. Another would be the joining up of the British and French for military operations against Russia. At present the position is that France is left to play a lone hand against Bolshevism.

Therefore it does not seem probable that the Russian armies will be employed in the near East; at least not on an extended scale. The logical thing to expect is a movement into Siberia, where Japan is assuming to dictate what sort of Government the Russians shall have. "No communism any place in Siberia where Japanese troops are located" is General Oi's dictum. But the Russian winter has now set in and the ousting of the Japanese probably will have to be postponed until next Spring. At that time, however, providing the Moscow government survives, and the Japanese remain in Siberia, we may confidently expect large operations in the Vladivostok and Possiet Bay sectors.

Dear Bert.—I suppose that you read the papers, too. I don't mean the stocks-and-shares-page, or the page that tips the winners at our Autumn Race meeting, for the only result of such reading is that exchange drops at the wrong time or the gee-gee gets the bit between its teeth and the pari-mutuel gets your money. I mean, the ordinary news pages, which not only give you all the news, but more. And even then they don't give you enough.

Reading my daily dose of newspaper this morn, I was so annoyed at the scanty reports of things, that I almost made up my mind to send a jolly sharp note to the editor about it, but I like to be kind to editors, because, unlike human beings they have very few bright spots in their lives. Fancy having to read all the letters they receive and on such a variety of silly subjects.

* * *

I agree that we cannot expect everything in the newspapers, but what I do object to is the rather scanty reports of some happenings. They lead you gently on with some interesting report, and then they let you down flop by keeping back just the very information you have been wanting. In one of our papers, and on the very first page, there were little notices sprinkled all over it, telling you to wear boiled shirts to be in the fashion. What on earth does it all mean? Those of us who wear shirts at all don't have the beastly things toasted. Its bad enough to have them boiled at some of the laundry establishments. Most of my be-in-the-fashion-boiled-shirt has almost been boiled away. But I don't want to become shirty so we will change the subject.

Now the other day one newspaper told us of a Parisian who had thrown his wife out of the window four times. That is all the information we were given. Four times did that Parisian ladle his wife out of the bedroom window, and then we are expected to believe that the incident was closed. Now what I want to know is this: What did his wife say? Was this man dropping a hint to his wife that he did not want her hanging round, or was he merely trying to see just how far he could throw a handful of wife?

* * *

But perhaps there was something wrong with the door, and he couldn't push her out through it. Or perhaps the neighbors objected to wives being thrown out of the door, so he hit upon the happy idea of throwing her out of the window. I should have been quite satisfied if the newspaper report had told us that the wife, "feeling irritated or vexed at his treatment, told him to stop his larking."

* * *

Then again, we are told of a certain man who had just arrived by train meeting a lady in the street whom he believed to be his wife and kissing her, only to find out later that it was his mother-in-law. There the report ends again. No more details are given, and there we've been perched up on the horns of a dilemma. I am still wondering how the fellow got on. Why did not the paper relieve the awful suspense? Did the man fall down unconscious, and is he going on as well as can be expected under the circumstances? Or was the shock too much for him?

Reading the newspapers will, I am sure, one day result in my doing an Ophelia stunt and going about with straws in my hair. Take another case. A Spaniard and his wife and little boy in a gun shop last week let a match fall on a barrel of dynamite, and the man and woman were blown through the roof, but the little boy remained uninjured. There the story ends again. No further details are filled in. It would have been alright if the newspaper report told us that the little boy remarked upon seeing the accident, "That's the first time I have seen father and mother go out together for years."

And then from another part comes the news that a fire-engine dashed into a house. That's all. No more information. It merely dashed into a house. No doubt it sounded its gong and all that, but what an added interest if they had only told us that, upon alighting from the engine, after dashing into the house, the Captain said to the lady, "Don't suppose you are happening to want any fires today, pet?"

* * *

Of course we are all fed up with the bits of news we get from the various peace conferences. And last but not least what are the miners doing? This is the anniversary of the day when there was no miners' strike last year, and up to the time of going to press no news of a fresh strike is to hand. Cheerio.

Kangaroo Hunting Thrilling

Novice In Australia's Wildest Pastime Describes Perilous Chase On Horseback and Finish Fight Of Dog Against 'Boomer'

BY CLARENCE E. BOSWORTH

Away out in the Australian bush, where the ants build hills eight feet high, where grass grows on trees, where several species of the birds have no wings, and where some of the animals have more than two-thirds of their being in their hindquarters, some of the wildest, and most thrilling sport is furnished by chasing on horseback the "old man," red or boomer kangaroo.

It is the favorite sport of the Australian bushman. While in Australia as United States Trade Commissioner investigating, among other things, the origin of the leather which produces kangaroo shoes, I had an opportunity to see some of this stock on the hoof, so to speak, and actually to run it down.

On account of the great distance, the exclusiveness of the sport and the consequent peril in which the rider finds himself, only a very few Americans have indulged in this sport, which is without doubt as wild and thrilling as is to be found anywhere in the world.

PREMIER HORSEMAN

West Australia's premier horseman is J. Douglas Paterson, son of the Hon. William Paterson, who held that position until his advanced years forced him to yield the palm to his strapping son, whose riding would shame a Centaur. It was with him that I rode through the Australian bush at breakneck speed and brought to earth the raw material for ten pairs of the finest footwear that ever graced a woman's foot.

Our hunt was staged in the woods of the Paterson station or ranch at Pinjarra, where are raised the rams and ewes and their sons and daughters which have won for the owners of "Creaton" enough champion ribbons to cover one whole wall of the spacious office. The first, second and third prize ribbons are valued so little at "Creaton" that the Patersons stow them away up in the attic in empty jam tins.

On the morning of the hunt, after preliminaries had been attended to, our party of five started out. It included Paterson, mounted on as pretty a white faced thoroughbred mare as any horse lover would want to see; young Angus, on a beautifully turned Timor pony nearly as fast through the bush as any of our horses; Alf, on a Breumby (a native wild horse), was leading the dog, a crossbred greyhound; Captain Hughes, a Canadian deep water skipper, doing remarkably well on a specially chosen quiet mare, and I was well up above all of them on a roan thoroughbred standing nearly seventeen hands. She could run like a deer and jump like one, too, as I found out later.

We had ridden perhaps half a mile from the house when a great iguana, fully six feet long, skirted down the trail ahead of us for all the world like an alligator on land fleeing from the wrath to come. In fact, I thought it was some kind of alligator and gave chase just to see it hustle in a series of great leaps with its short legs wiggling frantically even when the thing was in the air. With a smile of relief the big lizard dived down an embankment and disappeared. A few moments more and we were at the edge of the bush. Here we pulled up for instructions and they were much needed, for two of us in the party were Jackaroos, or the tenderest of tender feet, in the matter of kangaroo chasing.

"Now we'll be in kangaroo territory in another fifty yards," said Paterson. "Alf, you work over there with the dog, fifty yards to my right. Angus, you get fifty yards beyond Alf. Boz, you ride fifty yards to my left, and you, Captain, ride fifty yards to his left. Keep fan shape in your line; don't talk; don't call out if you see a boomer; just whistle."

"Then what?" I asked, for ahead of us was the queerest looking country to ride a horse in I ever saw. There were big gum trees, big and little ant hills, black boys (a queer tree with frowzy, grasslike ton instead of branches and leaves), and, as I found out later, dry and wet creeks, thickets, iron stone, soft sinking sand and just plain earth and grass under foot.

I had a sort of impression that the kangaroo were down in a paddock feeding like a lot of cows and just waiting to be chased. They had told me they were "down in the paddock," but this country ahead of us didn't look like any paddock I had ever seen. But a paddock in Australia is any fenced-in piece of land and may contain anything from one or two acres to a quarter of a million—the largest I know of personally, but they tell me there are larger ones. The one we were in then had 600 acres in it and is looked upon as one of the smaller paddocks.

"Why, then," answered Paterson, "you ride hell for leather after the boomer and the dog until we ride the boomer down."

"Oh!" was all I said, but I thought a lot. How stupid of me not to think of running a perfectly good horse full tilt through a country that we in Eastern America wouldn't even ride a horse through at a walk if we could help it. Even then I was pretty sure we must break through that bush into open country, so I spread out with the rest and—the hunt was on.

We hadn't gone a hundred yards when Paterson let out a shrill whistle and away he went. I got a glimpse of something reddish followed by a dark streak; this was the boomer and the dog, and then Paterson's white shirt darting in and out among the trees for just an instant, and I was alone. The bush is so thick here that a horseman less than a hundred yards away is out of sight. My mare started in pursuit, but wow!—was I supposed to ride a good horse through country, like that, especially another man's horse?

I pulled up, thought it over for just a second and decided that must be the program. So away we went—but not far, no, not far. I tried to handle the horse in the bush as I would a bridle path mount and it didn't work. She made straight for a big gum tree, at least I thought she did, and I pulled her to the right of it with all my might. She fought to go to the left, Australian style; I had just a shade the better of the argument and we hit the gum just enough to unbalance the mare and do a flipflop.

MAZES OF THE BUSH

It was beautifully done, too, considering lack of rehearsals, for neither of us was hurt and we scrambled to our feet with all our wind in us. I had a dim impression of having lost a few teeth but found that they were only the odd pieces of my broken pipe stem in my mouth. My glasses were still on my nose. The mare had a bit the better of the recovery and got away before I could catch her. Just then Hughes rode up and I borrowed his horse and went in pursuit.

Now the Australian bush is a poor place for a new chum to ram around in by himself. Even experienced bushmen get lost frequently, and it is not seldom that they get lost forever. There are no landmarks. Whichever way you go or look it is all the same. But even though I had heard all this I thought it a poor woodsman who couldn't catch a horse that had wandered off a little way and get back to the starting point. Besides, she was another man's horse and I didn't want him to lose her on my account. So off I rode in the general direction and was surprised to see how little trail she left. This is another peculiarity of the bush. I rode this way and that for fifteen minutes and then came across her quietly feeding off the top of a black boy. Now to get back.

I judged that I had made two sides of a triangle in the chase and would save time by cutting across its base to the starting point. I rode a distance which I thought surely would bring me somewhere near the waiting Captain, coo-oo-ed and whistled, but got no answer. Riding a little further I called again with no better result. Believing in safety first, I doubled back on the trail the two horses had made, picking up my single trail after some difficulty and doubled back upon it. In a few moments more I was back with the rest, who were much concerned as to my safety.

Their congratulations on my wandering about the bush after a loose horse and returning safely without aid were hearty. All they care about are men. During my private session they had captured the kangaroo, a fair sized boomer, and Alf and Angus brought it back to us. Then we resumed the hunt.

This time we rode for a good half mile before putting up another. We were just at the edge of a dry creek when we stirred up one quite a distance beyond. Then country here was a bit more open, so we took the creek with a flying leap. Alf freed the dog from the leash and we all got away in a fair run. The dog pushed this fellow pretty hard and he started to double back, saw us and made for a clump of trees over at the left. My mare actually sulked when I held her in to let the others pass, for I had decided to make this run easy to get the hang of bush riding. Hearing the others shout I saw Paterson's white shirt cutting a half circle around me, and I, forgetting prudence, put spurs to the mare to get abreast of him.

Alf and Angus dashed in from other directions, and there in just a bit of a clearing among the gums and black boys we saw the dog grab the boomer at the base of the tail. Round and round they went until the 'roo stopped. Quick as a flash the dog jumped for the boomer's neck but missed. Up against a tree backed the "old man" before the dog could grab him, and, tripoding himself up on tail and hind legs, prepared to fight.

The dog would back away and then rush in as if really to attack, but the wily kangaroo dog knows better, for in the long toe of that three-toed hind foot the 'roo has a wicked weapon. It is efficient enough to rip dog or man from throat to pelvis. So the dog would whirl and face his prey at a safe distance. Walking back and forth, much as a dog does before a cat, with eyes glistening and every muscle aquiver, the dog kept the boomer bailed up, and we watched. Several times the 'roo's hind leg shot out, but fortunately the dog was too quick.

After one of these wicked slashes, and while the dog was recovering from a spring aside, the 'roo broke from bay and started to run. This was his fatal mistake, for in a flash the dog had him by the neck and down they came. Those wicked hind legs whipped out in vicious slashes, but the dog's body was well out beyond the 'roo and they did no damage. I jumped off my horse and tried to get an action picture, but when I snapped the 'roo had his legs almost at right angles to his body and in the picture looks quite harmless. The gleam in the dog's eyes belies the 'roo's position, however. A moment or two more and the dog's powerful jaws had crushed every bone from skull to shoulder—and we had another tail to our credit.

DOG AGAINST BOOMER

This kill showed me the eminent fairness of the sport. No guns, knives or traps—just dog against boomer, and riding through such country at whirlwind speed gives the rider quite as much chance of getting killed as getting kangaroo. But the quickness and intelligence of the well trained bush horse makes the sport comparatively safe if you make sure your horse clears trees enough to let your legs by and your head under.

We got four boomers and one brush kangaroo during the day, but the one we got just after lunch gave us the best run of the lot. First a word about the tucker. "Tucker" is Australian for things to eat, from a sandwich to a banquet. Ours was a regular outdoor banquet. Going down into a clearing we built a fire and had two roast chickens and a leg of lamb, two loaves of bread fresh out of the oven that morning, a quart jar of jam and various other things, all of which Peter, the aborigine, had brought over in the wagon for us. All of it for six, and we didn't leave much, either.

After lunch and a bit of rest for the horses we saddled up for the afternoon hunt. We jumped a creek and got into a sort of gum tree grove, fairly free of black boys and ant hills, with a thicket at the right. It was also well grassed, so that our unshod horses made little noise as we rode.

Young Angus on the pony, scampering around somewhere behind the thicket, startled a big boomer just ahead of us. I was just getting ready to take a picture of the riders ahead of me when this fellow popped up out of the grass. Before he had risen full height I snapped and got a good picture of him. He heard the camera's click and dashed into the thicket to meet Angus head on coming through it. We rode full tilt after him. Without the slightest warning the 'roo shot up almost under my horse's nose and passed astern in a flying leap.

Down the hill he went toward the creek in a series of tremendous bounds, with all of us after him as hard as we could ride. I put my mare over the creek, up one side and down the other of a little rise, with the 'roo dog in full flight ahead. Beyond was a maze of black boys and other things I was too busy to identify. Just as I was wondering where the others were I heard a rush, and Alf, Angus and Paterson flew by and my mare gave a tremendous leap over a dry creek which I didn't even see, and we were all into the thick bush again riding hell for leather. That isn't profanity; it's Australian and very descriptive.

FORTY-TWO FOOT JUMP

Through the thicket we went with our horses fairly wallowing in a wild mixture of full speed and stumbling in the sinking, sandy bottom. Up a rise we tore and the dog and boomer swung to the right over a little hill. This was my chance. Urging the mare, I tore after them down the other side and out into a fairly good opening. Fifty yards ahead was a huge fallen log, and behind that more thicket. I pulled to the right to skirt the log, ran through the thicket with my mare making a series of wild leaps, but always landing right side up, and almost abreast of the dog. The leaps were to clear a series of ant hills, hard as concrete, hidden in the brush. I didn't even see them. As the 'roo approached the log he leaped, twisted and hurtled through the air on his side an almost incredible distance. We measured it afterward and from take-off to landing it was just forty-two feet.

Pulling up as quickly as I could I saw the rest headed full speed for the log. How they stopped in time I don't know, but when I got under way again they were ahead of me, going just as fast as they had followed. Back up the hill we went and saw the 'roo run head-on into a fence. Paterson pulled alongside and the dog made a true grab, and one more 'roo was ours.

Tired and satisfied we started for home, and on the way put up a wild boar from a thicket. We had a thrilling, hair-raising battle with him before we had him captured alive. But that is another story.

Correspondence

"THE AUTOCRAT OF THE CUSTOMS"

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir: The fall of monarchical institutions in Europe, and the substitution of democratic or republican governments gives one a good idea of the feeling of civilised humanity in the matter of one man power. The expressed opinion of the opponents of President Wilson's administration is that he exceeded his lawful powers, and as President acted too much as autocrat.

I therefore appeal to you, who published in your valuable paper the reported statement of Sir Francis Aglen, the present Inspector General of the Chinese Customs Service, pronounced during his visit to Shanghai last May, that his power is absolute and autocratic, subject to no possible appeal beyond himself. Now that China is an avowed republic, it must be considered an anomaly that she should allow a servant, the head of a department, autocratic power. Last Spring this autocrat issued a circular announcing the inauguration of a much-needed superannuation scheme. And here I must apologise for introducing the personal element into my letter.

As a customs examiner I was notified that in consideration of the issue to me of one year's pay, in place of the year's leave which my circumstances as a family man had never allowed me to enjoy, my resignation was called for on or before the 30th June, 1915. This order I complied with, but rearing and educating eight children, combined with the expenses attending the illness, death and burial of my wife, had exhausted my savings and my living expenses and finishing the education of my two youngest children, very quickly finished the extra year's pay—reducing me to the necessity of living on the charity of my adult children.

I then applied to Sir Francis Aglen for assistance, pointing out the inefficiency of the existing system of Retiring Allowances for the purpose for which they were intended, to which application no answer was returned except a bare acknowledgment of receipt.

When in the Spring of this year the Inspector General inaugurated the much-needed reform of a superannuation fund, I very naturally applied for permission to participate in its benefits; but was informed that Sir Francis Aglen was sorry that he could not see his way to allow his Pension scheme retrospective action; and, that consequently, those who had been retired before its publication, could derive no benefit therefrom.

It seems to me scarcely just that men who have devoted the best part of their lives to the Service should, simply because they happened to be born a couple of years sooner than their more fortunate brothers, be debarred from benefiting by this reform, which had been so long and urgently needed.

But it is alas, true, that after 33 years of blameless service, I am thrown on the street at the age of 75 to beg, borrow or steal for a living.

Of course, I am not alone in this trouble, which affects in like manner the widows and orphans of those who passed away before the issue of the Pension Scheme.

I am, Sir,

Yours faithfully,

FIAT JUSTITIA.

Being packed without crust, it is more economical than any crusted cheese, every particle being eatable. The manufacturers of the "Bouquet des Alpes" Brand, who are also the inventors of this kind of Swiss Cheese, succeeded in packing Gruyere-Cheese into small tins, and by their special process are not only able to secure a perfect preservation but also to retain the delicate flavour of the finest Gruyere-Cheese.

The Growing Child

Questions relating to Child Health and to related problems will be answered by experts of the U. S. Public Health Service. Address Child Health Editor, U. S. Public Health Service, Washington, D. C.

Herewith is presented the first of a series of articles on "The Growing Child," prepared by the United States Public Health Service. The first is on "Helping the School Teacher." Others will appear from time to time.

Nothing is so discouraging to a school teacher as the indifference and apathy with which many parents regard school work. Many of the strong, enthusiastic young teachers strive term after term to overcome this inertia by regularly holding parents' meetings, and this method is sometimes very successful. But have you ever attended these meetings? If so you will have noticed that usually only a few parents attend at all regularly; many do not come at all. Under these circumstances are you still one of those who complain about what is done and not done in your school?

Get out of the rut and show that you are really interested in your school. Visit the teacher in her classroom at intervals. Find out what her difficulties are, and then see if you cannot help her. In most instances you will be agreeably surprised to find that the teacher is far better posted on matters of health and sanitation relating to school children than you supposed. But she needs help and community support in order to put these modern ideas into practise.

PARENTS MUST WATCH

Have you heard of the tooth brush drill? In many of the schools throughout the country teachers now instruct their classes just how the teeth should be brushed. But what good is such instruction if parents do not make sure that it is not regularly carried out in the home. Has your youngster a tooth brush and a supply of tooth powder or tooth paste? Do you make sure that he cleans his teeth thoroughly before going to bed and starting for school?

And what has your youngster learned about dirty hands? Does he try to sneak to the dinner table without washing his hands and face spic and span? Does he understand how readily dirty hands carry disease germs into the mouth?

You can tell that the health teaching is effective by observing to what extent it changes the boy's habits for the better. However, the health teaching in school may be really very good, but, like many other careless youngsters, your child may promptly forget to apply the teachings outside of school. If that is the case, it probably indicates that you have failed to familiarise yourself with the work of the school. By all means do so at once and make your child observe health requirements at home also.

DEFECTS ARE DANGEROUS

Time and again careful investigations by competent medical authorities have shown that children lose a considerable part of the educational advantages open to them because they suffer from uncorrected physical defects such as decayed teeth, enlarged tonsils and adenoids, malnutrition, defects of vision and the like. But great as is this loss of education, it is not nearly so serious to the child as is the after effect of such uncorrected physical defects on the child's physical development.

Many parents do not realise that neglect of the teeth may lead to incurable heart disease or crippling rheumatism, that adenoids may result not only in chronic nasal catarrh but in a permanent disfigurement of the face, or that failure to correct malnutrition may stunt the child's growth and make his body more susceptible to disease.

Perhaps you may think that all this is of little interest to you. Your child, you believe, is well and strong. The chances are against you. Here are some figures showing the results of an examination of school children which was recently made by officers of the U. S. Public Health Service. The figures are typical of those which similar examinations have yielded in many different parts of the United States, and they show that a very large number of school children are suffering from physical defects.

The table, showing the percentage of certain physical defects observed in city and rural school children, follows:

	Adenoids.	Defective hearing.	Defective teeth.	Hypertrophic tonsils.	Refractive errors.

If your community is still so backward that your children do not enjoy the benefits of a school medical service, write to the U. S. Public Health Service for an interesting eight-page pamphlet Reprint No. 554, entitled "School Medical Inspection." A careful study of this reprint will convince you that such a service should at once be inaugurated in your schools.

"Began to think she would never get well."

Our Portrait is of Miss FLORRIE ORGAN, of 100, Clark Street, Ladywood, Birmingham, England, whose father writes:

"My daughter Florrie was suffering with a very bad head covered with Sores and Eruptions, and in fact her mother was afraid to comb her hair. She had been under several doctors, but all to no purpose, so I began to think she would never get well again and lose all her hair. As your 'Clarke's Blood Mixture' cured me of Glandular Swellings in the Neck some years ago, and so averted my having to undergo an operation, I decided to give 'Clarke's Blood Mixture' a fair trial in the case of my daughter, and I am pleased to say it effected a wonderful cure in just over a fortnight."

SUFFERERS from Bad Legs, Abscesses, Ulcers, Glandular Swellings, Piles, Eczema, Boils, Pimples, Spots, Pimples, Eruptions, Rheumatism, Gout, should realise that lotions and ointments can but give temporary relief; to be sure of complete and lasting benefit the blood must be thoroughly cleansed of the impure waste matter the root cause of such troubles. Clarke's Blood Mixture quickly attacks, overcomes and expels the impurities; that is why so many remarkable recoveries stand to its credit. Pleasant to take, and free from injurious ingredients.

Putting Jazz In Justice

London Courts Are Enlivened By Toys And Phonographs

A musical clock from Germany, found by the customs officers concealed on a ship, entertained the Tower Bridge court the other day. It was supposed to play the national anthem, and an exhibition of its powers was given by request.

Unfortunately, it persisted in giving a medley of Irish airs in funeral time, in which stray notes of "Kathleen Mavourneen" were mixed with equally stray notes of "Killarney" and the "Minstrel Boy."

"That's the worst rendering of the national anthem I have ever heard," said the magistrate. When put back into its box, the clock continued to play in jerks, and the witness had to wait until it ran down before he could proceed with his evidence.

Following the boat race, a game of "Sieve-O" enlivened an up-river police court. A police officer saw some boys and young men trying vainly to throw marbles into two sieves, which stood at an angle of about thirty degrees. But the prisoner was an expert at it. He could show them how it was done. He charged the boys a penny for two throws, and was offering watches as prizes to those who succeeded.

The magistrate told the prisoner to set up his sieves and show him if marbles could be thrown into them. The man did so well that the magistrate remarked presently:

"At that rate you would be giving watches away all day." But he added: "Pay 5 shillings."

There was a gramophone case in the courts the other week, and the judge asked what airs the instrument would play, and whether such great artists as Melba, Caruso, Tetrazzini, could be induced to perform.

The answer being in the affirmative, the judge said: "Don't have a common song; play something nice." So Caruso was set to sing "Queen of the Earth," his honor listening with great attention.

A Jack-in-the-Box caused much laughter in the probate court one morning when Sir Edward Carson released the spring and Jack popped up. There were a lot of other toys on the table, and when the judge asked what should be done with them, Sir Edward suggested caustically that they should be sent to the Athenæum Club.

Then he opened a bundle of toy-books, and read some verses from them to the judge and jury. In his best house of commons voice he recited this charming verse:

Little Tommy Timkins
Ran down the lane;
Never let his hoop fall,
Then ran back again.

When the laughter evoked by this pretty wit had subsided, Sir Edward gave the court another tit-bit:

Elsie Tomkins grow so fine.
She won't get up to feed the swine.

The case was one of alleged senile decay, or second childhood and a disputed will, and toys of all sorts, including dogs and dolls, a rabbit and a ball, were produced as evidence before the court.

Japanese Abuse Of Chinese Told In Plea For Government Aid

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, November 13.—A letter from the People's Union of the five districts of the Yenchi region about Hungchun received here states that five to six thousand Japanese troops arrived at Yenho, dug trenches around the city, seized telephone and telegraph stations and quartered soldiers at every street to prevent free traffic after eight o'clock in the evening.

Private country schools were damaged, and the farmers and teachers beaten. The Second District School at Holung was burned to the ground and several teachers and students were wounded. The Seventh School was also burned and women at Yenchi and Ilanhow were insulted. The Japanese police informed the people that 4,000 troops were to arrive on or about the 1st instant and be quartered in houses having "kangs," or Chinese brick beds, by threes or fives. The message requests the Government to protest against these actions.

OVERTURES DISCUSSED

Peking, November 13.—At yesterday's Cabinet meeting, Japan's four overtures concerning the withdrawal of her troops from Chientao were discussed and it was decided to send a reply to the Japanese Minister today. Secrecy has been preserved as to the content of the reply, but according to report its general tenor is this: China considers Japan's promise of withdrawal as bona fide and an evidence of respect for her sovereign rights, but regrets to be unable to accede to the proposal that Japan shall again despatch her troops to Chientao in case of future disturbances, as China will be alone responsible for the maintenance and restoration of order there.

STUDENTS INDIGNANT

The students of Peking are highly indignant at the high-handed action of the Japanese with regard to the Hungchun incident and have repeatedly elected delegates to interview the diplomatic authorities, in order to be informed of China's attitude toward the matter. Yesterday they again sent representatives to see Dr. W. W. Yen, and were received by Secretary Hsiung, who expressed the hope that the incident would be amicably settled in a few days and advised them to tell their fellow students to be calm.

The students have been holding street speaking campaigns in the capital.

Japan's willingness to withdraw troops is attributed to her having accomplished her object of burning the Korean revolutionary leaders headquarters at Chientao.

INCOME TAX TO GO INTO EFFECT, ASSERTS PEKING

Detailed Regulations Already Promulgated And Must Be Carried Out

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, November 13.—In reply to the telegraphic protests of the merchants with regard to the imposition of an income-tax, the Government has recently addressed a telegram to the different commercial bodies in the country, saying that the tax was decided upon in the first year of the country and therefore is not a new tax. At a recent discussion at a cabinet meeting, the telegram goes on to say, it was decided to carry it into effect immediately in order that the proceeds derived therefrom may be devoted to educational use. As the detailed regulations governing its operation have already been promulgated, the tax must be carried out, the telegram concludes.

OPINIONS INVITED

Recently the Government has dispatched a circular telegram to the military and civil governors of the provinces, inviting them to submit their opinions regarding the Consortium. In response to this request, Military Governor Tien of Shantung sent a telegraphic reply to the Government on the 9th instant, in which he urged the latter not to accept the harsh terms of the consortium.

The solution of the present financial situation, according to Governor Tien, lies in the immediate disbandment of superfluous troops so as to curtail expenditure, and the reorganisation of all taxes to increase receipts. If these two measures can be carried out, he believes that it is easy to restore the finances of the country to the stable conditions obtaining in the third and fourth years of the Republic. General Lu Yung-hsiang, Wang Chan-yuan, Li Hou-che and others have also replied, speaking in the same strain as General Tien.

RETRENCHMENT NEEDED

According the Yi Shih Pao, China's opposition or otherwise does not affect the formation of the Consortium. If China can afford not to borrow from it, well and good, but as a first step she should immediately proceed with her retrenchment policy. It would not improve matters to daily voice protests of opposition against the Consortium through the wire.

Peking, November 13.—It is confirmed in the Ministry of Finance that in view of the fact that the Consortium conditions are inimical to the sovereignty of China, the Government has decided to float domestic loans. The Premier and the Minister and Vice-Minister of Finance have reached an agreement with the native banks that the latter shall unite to form a banking group and loan money to the Government, when it is applied for. These banks are now making preparations and will not advance any funds until emergency arises.
